Gov. Murphy Leaves For Strike Talk Here As Auto Truce Fails

Governor Will Discuss Deadlock With Miss Perkins Today.

Plant, Union Each Accuses the Other

Settlement Hopes Fade as Negotiations Break Up in 5 Minutes.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Jan. 18.—Prospects for an early settlement of automotive strikes paralyzing General Motors Corporation production lines exploded today in a 5-minute meeting.

Leaders of the United Automobile Workers of America whose strikes have thrown 115,000 General Motors wage-earners out of work sat in a conference room with corporation officials.

"There was no discussion," a General Motors announcement said: "There can be no bargaining until the plants have been evacuated (of stay-in strikers)."

The union said General Motors "refused to enter into the negotiations."

Murphy on Way Here.

Late this afternoon Gov. Frank Murphy announced his immediate departure for Washington to confer on the strike situation with Federal officials he declined to name. He expressed confidence "the problem would be worked out. It may be long drawn out, but it need not be."

In Washington, Secretary of Labor Perkins said she and Gov. Murphy will confer tomorrow morning on the strike situation. The Governor, she said, did not intend to see President Roosevelt as far as she knew.

Miss Perkins said she was disappointed over collapse of the Detroit negotiations. She said the next step would be to "find a way out of the impasse—then go back to negotiating."

The entire situation tonight was back in a deadlock apparently more unyielding than it was last week when Gov. Murphy brought opposing leaders together in a 17-hour conference that produced a truce agreement providing for settlement negotiations to start today.

Again blocking the door to peace is the occupancy of two plants of the Fisher Body Co., a General Motors unit, at Flint, Mich., by union members who have held their positions since December 30 in spite of a street battle with police in which 27 persons were injured, and the subsequent calling out of 2,300 National Guardsmen.

Further complicating the impasse were union charges that General Motors committed "flagrant violations of a bona fide agreement" by agreeing to negotiate with the Flint Alliance, which the union said "is in no sense representative of automobile workers."

Violation of Faith Denied.

The Governor's truce agreement provided for evacuation of strikers-held plants before today's conference, in return for guarantees that General Motors would not attempt to operate them or remove dies or equipment. The U. A. W. A. evacuated strikers from plants in Detroit and Anderson, Ind., Saturday; then, charging a breach of faith by the corporation, instructed the strikers at Flint to hold their posts.

Despite these developments, General Motors announced today it "stands ready to carry out its agreements in good faith." The corporation made clear there was no retreat, however, from its stand that the Flint strikers it has described as "clearly trespassers," must leave the plants before negotiations begin.

Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. president, led the delegation of union officials to the General Motors offices a few minutes after 11 a. m. He was accompanied by Wyndham Mortimer and Ed Hall, union vice presidents; John Brophy, a director of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, and Lee Pressman, C. I. O. attorney.

Meeting them at the building entrance, H. W. Anderson, General Motors labor relations director, ushered them to the conference room. There C. E. Wilson, general assistant to William S. Knudson, executive vice president, joined them for a half hour's conversation.

Finally a door opened. In walked the three men General Motors had designated as its representatives for the scheduled conferences on eight demands of the workers—Knudsen, John Thomas Smith, general counsel, and Donaldson Brown, chairman of the corporation finance committee.

Few words were spoken. The union men said published accounts of their position were correct. Corporation representatives handed them a statement by Knudsen. The General Motors delegation walked out again.

The whole proceeding lasted but five minutes. As Martin left he said "the conference is off."

The union president had charged General Motors with attempts to reopen the parts department of the strike-closed Cadillac plant at Detroit which "stay-in" union men evacuated Saturday, with participating in the tearing down of picket

Roper, Miss Perkins Promise Aid to 1,000 Protesting Sailors

Copeland 'Blacklist' Will Get Full Hearings, Leaders Told.

Sympathy was expressed by two Cabinet members yesterday upon receiving leaders of a thousand sailors who marched on Washington to oppose certain parts of the Copeland "safety-at-sea" act.

Rain-drenched, but cheerful, the thousand sailors, some of whom had walked all the way from Baltimore the night before, gathered on Fifteenth street beside the Commerce Building while their leaders talked to Secretary Roper and Secretary Perkins. Their visit was quiet and orderly.

Miss Perkins served coffee to six burley leaders who gathered in her walnut-paneled office. Over the coffee cups they laid their grievances before her. She was entirely familiar with the smallest details of their problem before they spoke a word. She ended by reassuring them she would recommend to Congress that full hearings be held on the Sirovich resolution, which would delay enforcement of the Copeland act six months.

Secretary Roper likewise talked to the leaders for a half hour, telling them "I want to do the right thing and get to the right end. I would want hearings in full (on the Sirovich bill)."

JOSEPH CURRAN.

The sailors were led by Joseph Curran, chairman of the New York strike committee. He shared the rostrum in Cabinet discussions with S. M. Blinken, attorney for the strikers. Union officials representing stewards, firemen, seamen and other maritime branches, rounded out the official delegation.

Curran told Secretary Perkins

Franco Spurns Foreign Check On Volunteers

Plan to Halt Ships Only Recourse, Diplomats Say; French Vessel Bombed.

By the United Press.

London, Jan. 18.—A curt, critical note from Rebel Gen. Francisco Franco tonight wrought havoc with the non-intervention committee's elaborate plan to stem the flow of men and munitions to Spain.

While Franco did not refuse flatly to accept the plan, diplomats said his note was "rather negative, extremely argumentative and critical." Therefore they regarded the plan as dead, for Franco's assent is necessary to execute it.

As a result, diplomats expected the committee would turn toward an alternative plan to control men and supplies from points outside Spain.

Leftists Favored Plan.

The control plan, which involved stationing neutrals at Spanish port cities and border points to report the entry of soldiers or munitions into Spain, was sent to Franco's Salamanca headquarters January 1. It also was submitted for the approval of the loyalist government.

Valencia's reply was affirmative "in principle."

The committee's alternative plan provides that no recruiting offices for the enlistment of soldiers to fight in Spain shall be maintained in any foreign country. Further, it bans advertising for recruits in the press, by radio, by posters or by announcements at public meetings.

Heavy fines would be imposed on those offering gifts, payments or promises to engage recruits.

Further, it would provide restrictions on passports, which would be stamped "not valid for Spain," and would punish railroads selling tickets to Spain, save for persons having special authorization. Similar restrictions would be placed on steamships.

Other measures would prevent departure of aircraft for Spain.

Guest Is Killed As 700 Dine In Opera House

Story-Book Stabbing Is Aftermath to Argument at Labor Party.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 18.—The sensational knife slaying of a diner in the presence of 700 gay guests in the old Manhattan Opera House gave detectives real-life mystery as baffling as any in fiction to solve today.

Three men who fled the scene in dinner clothes were hunted tonight. One of them, authorities said, probably is the man who struck two fatal blows to the heart of Frank Cicero, 33, of Stamford, Conn., last night while bottles and dishes flew in a brief but vicious fight around the slain man's table.

Detectives were stationed at the homes of the men who had not returned nearly 24 hours after the crime was committed in a setting of music, dancing, and speeches by New York notables.

Elements of Fiction.

Scores of detective stories written about murders in the midst of a crowd of unsuspecting witnesses contained elements no more sensational than this death drama.

Not until dawn—six hours after the crime—were the 700 guests allowed to leave the scene. They were forced to resume their places at tables in the glass ballroom on the sixth floor of the Opera House, and then could leave only by twos and threes as detectives finished questioning them.

The dinner was being held in honor of Barney Shapiro, executive director of the Affiliated Ladies Apparel Carriers Association and president of the Garment Truckmen's Benevolent Association of New Jersey.

Argument Begins.

A noisy crowd in one corner of the room, Cicero among them, refused to be silenced as the toastmaster pounded for order. Men and women screamed in panicky efforts to leave that section when blows were struck and a bottle cracked over someone's head.

But the orchestra leader started music and a number of couples moved to the floor to dance while order was being restored by special

Mystery Bidder Gets Gelding For Eight Times His Feed Bill

Washington's great "horse mystery" with Cypress Du Beau, 8-year-old chestnut gelding, as its central figure, moved into the second act yesterday when he was auctioned off for $2,225 to pay a $300 storage bill due the Railway Express Agency, before a excited audience of 200.

After some very spirited bidding between two secret agents, both of whom refused to name their principals, the horse passed into the name of John N. Stranford, who apparently was working under instructions to get the steed at any cost.

Stranford fought off the bidding of William J. McEvoy, press agent for Pan-American Airways, as the bidding soared higher and higher, $25 to $100 at a crack, to a figure five times what the express company expected for the horse. Arthur P. Drury, lawyer for the express company, was astounded at the value of Cypress, whom he has been trying vainly to get some one to claim for a month.

Stranford, auditor of a morning newspaper here, pulled out a roll of large bills after a half-hour contest and, removing a rubber band, paid $1,000 down in cash. He then hastened in the company of the city editor of the paper back to his office to get more money. The bidding had gone much higher than he had anticipated, but he apparently had orders to get the horse, with money no object.

McEvoy, his rival stated: "No one knows what the horse can do, and no one has ridden him. He's

Tokyo Sees Living Costs Causing Crisis

Political Leaders Attack High Prices Caused by Military Policy.

Increased Taxes Make Japan's Future Dark, Observers Say.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Jan. 18.—The rising cost of living, which political leaders asserted sprang from swollen military programs, today confronted the government with an imminent crisis.

Since the new year prices of foodstuffs and other staples have risen from 10 to 30 per cent, in some instances as much as 50 per cent.

This today overshadowed every other political factor in the country. Every family in the empire was affected; mutterings of discontent were heard, especially among the lower classes. Uneasy officials recalled the "rice riots" of 1918.

Leaders Hit High Prices.

Leaders of the political parties, which oppose the militarists' ambitions to dominate imperial policy and also are fighting the Hirota government's financial and diplomatic policies, have seized on the issue of high prices.

"The government has failed to adjust its financial policy, resulting in a radical increase in military expenses and thereby oppressing the nation," declared leaders of the Minseito, which has a plurality in the House of Representatives.

This criticism was supported by the Seiyukai, second largest party, and other groups.

The government's new tax program (embodying the first important tax increases since 1926) also was bitterly assailed. Minseito leaders in Parliament passed a resolution which said:

"The government's tax reform bill embodies a number of unnecessary new taxes which threaten the livelihood of the masses. Never before has the fate of the country been so dark as at present."

Official spokesmen have tried to reassure the public that this was not the case, that the rise in prices was only temporary and would subside. But the people were not inclined to listen to such arguments.

The finance ministry has tried to explain the rise as part of a world tendency, and asserted that harmful inflation would not ensue. Officials of the ministry have suggested as remedies modification of currency policy and strengthening control of foreign exchange. They hoped further increases in foreign trade would ease the situation.

The budget on which political leaders are centering their fire is that for the fiscal year April 1, 1937-March 31, 1938. It totals 3,041,000,000 yen ($869,726,000) an increase of 32 per cent over the current fiscal years' figures, hitherto the high mark.

46.3 Per Cent to Army, Navy.

With the budget is linked a tax "reform" program which provides for the first important increases in direct taxation since 1926. Income taxes are to be raised, exemption limits lowered and prices of government monopolies' goods raised.

Japan's army and navy program have been rising steadily and rapidly since the conquest of Manchuria began in 1931, but now for the first time the people are asked to dig down in their pockets to finance the militarist-imperialist programs.

The new budget allots 1,409,000,000,000 yen (about $400,000,000), or 46.3 per cent of the total, to the army and navy, about $205,000,000 to the army and $195,000,000 to the navy. These are the largest defense estimates in Japan's history, peacetime or wartime.

The budget is to be laid before the Imperial Parliament, or Diet, when it reconvenes January 21. Diet approval is considered almost certain, in spite of the rising opposition of the political parties.

Meanwhile, Japan is worried about her ability to maintain the costs of world naval competition.

The principal naval powers apparently are embarking on that competition, largely because of the termination of the Washington and London naval treaties, which Japan herself denounced.

It was indicated authoritatively today the Japanese navy's first principle is to maintain a fleet capable of holding the western Pacific against any other navy—or all other navies.

In spite of the naval high command's insistence that its policy is independent and designed to build a navy adapted to Japan's peculiar needs, its efforts to fulfill this first principle are determined in large degree by the programs of other nations, especially the United States.

21 U. S. Citizens Are Believed Safe From China Reds

Nanking, China (Tuesday), Jan. 19 (A.P.).—The United States Embassy today was advised 75 foreigners had arrived in Tungkwan, Shensi Province, from Sianfu, where their safety had been thought endangered by a Communist invasion.

Three British subjects and five Russians were the only foreigners remaining in Sianfu, capital of Shensi Province, according to the advices the embassy received from Loyang from its second secretary, J. Hall Paxton.

Americans were not specifically mentioned, but it was assumed here that the entire group, understood to total 21, was among those arriving in Tungkwan.

The foreigners prepared to proceed to Loyang today.

Grady to Get Major Post With League

Former State Department Aide to Represent U. S. at Geneva.

Place on Economics Unit Due for Confirmation on Thursday.

By Felix Morley.

Copyright, 1937, by The Washington Post.

Dr. Henry F. Grady, until recently chief of the Trade Agreements Division of the Department of State, has been designated as the American member of the Economic Committee of the League of Nations. His formal appointment by the Council of the League is expected at the session of that body which will be convened in Geneva Thursday.

At the same meeting of the Council it is planned to reconstitute the Economic Committee, composed of official or semi-official experts from the principal industrial nations which are members of the League, as a "Raw Materials Committee." It will then be the important duty of this committee, with Dr. Grady as the American member, to make recommendations for a better international distribution of basic raw materials, particularly as regards the resources of colonial areas.

American membership on the Economic Committee, now the most important of the League's technical organs, is not a new development. Lucius Eastman, former president of the Merchants' Association of New York, was the first appointee, having been indorsed for the post by President Coolidge and continued under Mr. Hoover. He was succeeded by Prof. James Harvey Rogers, named by President Roosevelt in 1933.

Appointment Significant.

The scheduled appointment of Dr. Grady, however, is especially significant both because of the leading position he has held in the Roosevelt Administration and because of the vital work the transformed Economic Committee is now about to undertake. Its efforts may very largely determine whether or not Germany's demands for easier access to supplies of raw materials can be met without war.

Because of its connection with the subject of world peace, President Roosevelt has taken a keen personal interest in Dr. Grady's appointment. During the latter's visit to Washington shortly after Christmas he was summoned to the White House and urged to assume the post. Secretary Hull, then in South America, strongly supporting the request. So while the appointment will nominally be made by the League Council, as in the case of every member of the Economic Committee, it will to all intents and purposes be an official assignment from Washington. It is desired at Geneva that all members of the new Raw Materials Committee be at least semi-official appointees of their governments in order that their recommendations, when made, may receive prompt and effective support.

To further the Geneva liaison with the Department of State Dr. Leo Pasvolsky, until recently an expert attached to the Trade Agreements Division, has been made a special assistant to Secretary Hull. Dr. Pasvolsky, an authority on international trade problems, is personally familiar with Geneva procedure and will work in close collaboration with Dr. Grady.

Bonnet's Influence Felt.

It is of further significance that M. Georges Bonnet, named last week as the new French Ambassador to Washington, was a minister of commerce very influential in getting the League to take up the raw materials problem. The Baldwin government in Great Britain is also strongly behind the move, which was first publicly suggested in Sir Samuel Hoare's speech to the League Assembly on September 11, 1935.

Dr. Grady is regarded here as having virtually ideal qualifications for the work he is about to undertake. In addition to his direction of the reciprocal trade agreements policy he has served as a trade commissioner and commercial attache abroad and is as well known in the Orient and Latin-America as in Europe. Dr. Grady is president of the Pan-American Society of San Francisco and a member of the Pacific Foreign Trade Council. He is now professor of international trade, and dean of the College of Commerce, at the University of California.

As a member of the League's raw materials committee he will probably have to visit Geneva every three months, remaining for sessions of a week's duration each time. The general procedure of a League technical committee is to secure unanimous expert agreement at Geneva on a minimum program of international co-operative action. This program is then referred to their respective governments by the committee members for such em-

2 Bandits Hold Up 30 at Legion Post; Get $1,000, Escape

New York, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Two youthful armed bandits lined up 30 men and women against a wall at an American Legion post's headquarters in Brooklyn tonight and robbed them of an estimated $1,000 in money and jewelry.

An informal meeting of Rugly Post and the women's auxiliary had just been called to order when the robbers entered and ordered the members to "line up against the wall." One guarded the victims while the other searched them. They backed out of the room and escaped.

Parley on High Court Powers To Be Summoned by President

Group to Seek Tribunal More Favorable to New Deal Acts.

By William V. Nessly.

President Roosevelt soon will call a conference to consider the Administration's impasse with the Supreme Court over powers of Congress and to deal also with the Federal judicial system in general, it was announced yesterday.

Following a conference with the President, Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), Indiana, told reporters Mr. Roosevelt will summon the conference on possible legislation dealing with the supreme tribunal, and that other questions pertaining to the lower court set-up will be considered. Among the latter are a number of recommendations in the annual report of Attorney General Cummings.

The identity of the conferees and the time for the meeting had not been decided on, but it was understood that Congressional leaders, representatives of the Department of Justice and other authorities on court structure, functions and procedure would be among those called.

Controversy Over Curb.

Announcement of the conference came in the midst of the heated controversy over possible legislation or constitutional amendment to curb the Supreme Court's power to throw 250,000 Expected to See Parade and Ceremony Despite Weather.

Speaker Bankhead Holds Rabbit Foot

Every Hotel Room Full as City Prepares for Greatest Day.

Rain and colder was the Weather Man's heartless forecast last night for Inauguration Day, as more than 100,000 were expected to arrive here today and tomorrow morning for the ceremonies, joining thousands already in the Capital.

Indicating that the jinx which has plagued the majority of March 4 Inaugurals with rain, snow or extreme cold does not intend to relent for the first January 20 exercises, the Weather Bureau said "mostly cloudy, colder," may be expected today.

The discouraging weather outlook, however, failed to hinder plans for a celebration which officials confidently predicted will be the greatest in history, with an estimated 250,000 spectators viewing the parade and the oath-taking rites.

City Colossal Midway.

Nor did it interfere with the invasion of Roosevelt rooters from every American State and Territory who already last night had turned the Capital into a seething hub, with historic Pennsylvania avenue a veritable carnival midway.

House Speaker Bankhead was still optimistic over tomorrow's weather prospects, regardless of forecasts. He exhibited a rabbit's foot and a buckeye nut.

"These are for Roosevelt weather," he explained.

"How about a horseshoe?" he was asked.

"That's hanging over the barn-door back home," came the reply.

Thoughout the day and into the wee morning hours, trains, planes and buses disgorged Iowa corn growers, Alabama cotton raisers, New England bankers—all primed for tomorrow's first January 20 Inaugural in history.

Stationmaster W. H. Marks asserted 125,000 passengers will pass through Union Station today, the vast majority of them incoming. He forecast traffic volume would approximate 275,000 tomorrow.

Hurried check-ups at hotels—all filled up—air line offices, bus terminals, grandstand ticket offices and other focal points gave indication that the precedent-setting ceremonies tomorrow will attract a record smashing crowd.

3,000 Police on Hand.

Nearly 3,000 policemen, Marines and Secret Service men will guard President Roosevelt from the time he leaves the White House tomorrow forenoon until the parade is over and he is once more inside the mansion. Protection arrangements are said to be the most extensive in Inaugural history.

Capt. William S. Orthman, chief of Capitol police, said all entrances to the Capitol, as well as interior passages, have been blockaded and will be guarded.

The only persons allowed inside the building while the Inaugural ceremonies, scheduled to begin at noon, are under way, will be Senators, Representatives and those able to identify themselves. No one will be allowed at the windows.

The House convenes at 11:40 a. m. tomorrow, the Senate 11:50. At 12 o'clock the ceremonies will begin, opening with the prayer, followed by the swearing in of Vice President Garner, then President Roosevelt. The President then will deliver his Inaugural address and the benediction will conclude the rites, whereupon the parade will get under way.

Admiral Grayson announced the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Vice President and Mrs. Garner, Cabinet members and heads of all governmental agencies will attend services at St. John's Episcopal Church tomorrow morning prior to the oath-taking ceremonies at the Capitol.

Attended Also in 1933.

Arrangements were made by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, as was the case on March 4, 1933, when they worshiped in the Lafayette Square edifice opposite the White House before he was sworn in for the first time.

The Rev. Endicott Peabody, headmaster of Groton when Roosevelt was a student there, will officiate. He will be assisted by the Rev. Oliver Hart, rector of St. John's; the Rev. Frank Wilson, rector of the Hyde Park (N. Y.) Episcopal Church, and the Rev. H. S. Wilkinson, rector of St. Thomas' Church here, the Roosevelts' congregation.

Mounting rapidly to a state of irrepressible enthusiasm, which will

Disaster Fears Heightened Along Raging Ohio River; Pittsburgh Warned.

By the Associated Press.

Drenching downpours wrought new havoc along glutted streams in the Ohio Valley yesterday.

Rains ranging from 1 to more than 2 inches sent the mighty Ohio out of its banks in some sectors and raised fears of serious flood damage along its 980-mile course from Pittsburgh to Cairo, Ill.

The broad river and its tributaries swelled steadily. Hundreds of lowlanders joined several thousand others who had fled to the hills. Red Cross units established quarters to care for refugees in the inundated areas. Industrial plants, which lost $1,000,000 worth of machinery in floods last March, moved equipment.

Workers Reinforce Dikes.

An army of workmen strengthened threatened levees. Turbid waters swashed through the streets of several communities and coursed over thousands of acres of land. Several idle strip mines were engulfed in Indiana. Many schools were closed. A number of merchants in the danger zones loarded up store fronts and carried stock to upper floors. At least four deaths were attributed to the inundations.

A forecast of fair weather with temperatures dropping as low as 18 degrees presaged the end of the excessive rainfall in Illinois, Indiana, Missouri and Ohio. These States bore the brunt of the flood damage, although streams splashed over the countryside also in Arkansas, Tennessee and Kentucky.

Cincinnati experienced its thirty-first flood in 54 years. The Ohio River reached the 55-foot level there, 3 feet above flood stage, and was expected to reach 58 or 60 feet by tomorrow. The Muskingum and Licking Rivers submerged highways near Zanesville. Marietta shop keepers transported stock to upper floors. Cottage dwellers were routed along the Little Miami. The Red Cross cared for 27 persons at Newtown. Deputies rescued four children from a marooned home at Miami Grove. Two hundred residents of Rome were isolated. Water swirled through Ripley streets.

Edison Takes Assistant Navy Secretary Oath

Son of Famous Inventor Is Advocate of Adequate National Defense.

Repeating the ceremony a half dozen times for the benefit of photographers and news-reel cameramen, Charles Edison yesterday was formally sworn in as the new Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

After receiving his commission from Secretary Swanson, the new Assistant Secretary took the oath of office, administered by Chief Clerk of the Navy Department, William D. Bergman. Present at the ceremony were Secretary and Mrs. Swanson, Admiral W. D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations; Rear Admiral H. E. Lackey and Mrs. Edison.

In thanking the Secretary for his commission from the President the new Assistant Secretary said:

"I have a deep appreciation of the importance of the responsibilities you have just conferred upon me. It is my earnest desire to discharge them in such a manner as to preserve the respect and confidence of our Commander in Chief, of yourself, of the Navy, and of the American people whom we serve."

Instrument for Peace.

Turning to those witnessing the ceremony, Edison added: "My message to you is: Have an adequate Navy which by its mere potentialities can keep this country free from war. Make the Navy an instrument for the preservation of peace, but if in spite of all war should come, let there be no doubt about America's ability to defend her shores from aggression."

As Assistant Secretary, his first business will be to discuss the Walsh-Healy act with Labor Department officials, Mr. Edison stated at his first press conference yesterday afternoon.

Without going into details, he admitted the Navy was earnestly seeking a solution to the problem of industrial concerns refusing to bid on Navy contracts, automatically coming under the Walsh-Healy act providing minimum wage and maximum hour requirements.

Previously the department has had difficulties in getting supplies of steel, iron and copper for use in navy yards. Industrial leaders have indicated their reluctance to fulfill

Man Confesses Kidnap Notes To Two Hollywood Juveniles

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 18.—A small, thin man walked into the Central Police Station tonight, gave his name as David Harris and confessed, said Detective Lieutenants Edward Romero and Thomas Bryan, that he had directed $25,000 extortion-kidnaping threats against two juvenile film stars, Jane Withers and Freddie Bartholomew.

"I'm the man that sent the threats," the officers quoted Harris. "I thought I might get some money without really harming anyone. I was broke and hungry."

Government agents, who were called by police, compared Harris' handwriting with the extortion letters and declared in many characteristics it was similar.

Harris, only four feet, eight inches in height and weighing only 96 pounds, stood between the two officers and fingered a frayed newspaper clipping of the Withers threat. He said, officers declared, that he got the idea from reading about threats sent to Shirley Temple.

"I really don't know why I did it," the 46-year-old Harris was quoted by police. "I didn't have any idea of carrying out the plot."

Both Jane and Freddie have received threatening notes in recent weeks.

Iranian Shah Insulted, His Envoy Quits Paris

Group Named To Draft U.S. Power Policy

Roosevelt Appoints Ickes Chairman and Urges Quick Action.

By Robert C. Albright.

In an unexpected sequel to an intra-Administration controversy over Federal power policy, President Roosevelt yesterday appointed a special committee to draft a uniform plan for generation, transmission and sale of Government-produced hydroelectric power.

President Roosevelt named Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes chairman of the committee, and asked him to frame in a fortnight a national policy, relating primarily to yardstick rates, in advance of Federal legislation on the subject.

Bonneville Power Cited.

"Power from the Bonneville project will be available for distribution this year," the President wrote Ickes. "Therefore, legislation is immediately necessary.

"At the same time, it is highly advisable that such legislation conform to a national power-generating, transmitting and distributing policy, such policy to be uniform as far as practicable or advisable.

"This does not mean identical rates in every part of the country, but it does mean uniformity of policy."

The President said the policy agreed on will be applied to existing projects, such as Boulder Dam, to portions of TVA and "to all new power developments as they are completed during the next few years."

Morgan, Norris Confer.

Mr. Roosevelt acted as a row over the Government's attitude toward private electric utilities split the TVA board and spread to Capitol Hill, where Chairman Arthur E. Morgan of the TVA conferred for four hours yesterday with Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, unyielding opponent of Federal-private power pooling.

Chairman Morgan in a statement Saturday favored a conciliatory Federal policy in treating with private power interests, as opposed to uncompromising positions taken by David E. Lilienthal, liberal young TVA director, and the veteran Norris.

Norris and Morgan met and parted friends yesterday, but with their sharp differences over Federal power policy unmended. Later in the day, the President's letter to Ickes was made public in the White House.

Similar to Memorandum.

Mr. Roosevelt's proposal dovetailed closely with a confidential memorandum recently submitted to the House Reorganization Committee by its counsel which recommended appointment of a special committee by Congress to determine a policy to "provide adequate protection for the national investment or definite guides to be followed by administrative agencies."

"The most important proposal * * * that may be made without stopping to make extended examinations is that, in order to protect Federal investments, present and future, and bring about uniformity, Congress should immediately legislate to enforce the use, in rate-making, and otherwise when proper accounting is needed in the management of federally owned power operations, of definite methods to determine original costs, and the amortization thereof, and the other charges such as depreciation, which are to be covered by the rates determined on," the House memorandum stated.

Bailey Backs Morgan.

Other developments in the conflict over power policy:

Senator Josiah W. Bailey, North Carolina Democrat, took issue with Norris' views and indorsed Chairman Morgan's appeal for a conciliatory approach to the power problem as "a very fine and constructive statement." He said he "hoped the President would respond to it."

A study by Brookings Institution of natural resources and power possibilities, part of an investigation made for the Senate and House Reorganization Committees, was said to recommend centering of Federal power operations in a central Governmental agency.

Louis Brownlow, chairman of the President's committee on administrative management, whose sweeping reorganization report recently was recommended to Congress by the President, conferred with Senator Norris, presumably on power's place in the Federal reorganization plan.

Brownlow Follows Morgan.

Brownlow entered the Nebraskan's office shortly after Chairman Morgan and Senator Norris had exchanged expressions of mutual esteem.

Norris discussed his differences with Morgan over policy. He said he agreed "we never ought to take any step that would injure or destroy private investment if it can be avoided."

"Before we build competing transmission lines or anything of that sort," said Norris, "we ought to offer to buy the competing lines and pay what they are worth, just as Mr. Morgan says. We shouldn't build competing lines except as a last resort. Now I come to a disagreement. I think the last resort has been reached and has been reached for a year—for two years. In fact, we had done just what he says we ought to do before the Ashwander case."

TVA "Lost Millions."

Norris said that although the TVA won in the Ashwander suit, it "lost millions" from an injunction afterward obtained by the private electric utilities.

"The Gore injunction is another of the same kind," said the 75-year-old Senator. "The Supreme Court undoubtedly will set it aside, but it will be a year or two, and the TVA meanwhile has its hands tied. When it is all over, the TVA will have won, but lost money; the private companies will have lost, but made money."

Norris said his second point of disagreement with Morgan dealt with the policy of taking municipal customers away from private companies. The Nebraskan said that if this was a "hardship" for the private companies, it was because "of a position in which private power companies placed themselves contrary to what TVA was trying to do."

Pooling "Illogical."

"Dr. Morgan's policy would ostensibly put a municipality served by a private company into a place where it never could have municipal ownership," said Norris. "It would have to suffer the loss through all eternity. I don't agree. If the private companies lose, it is because they fought the law that would give them a remedy, and that I was much in favor of.

"I still do not believe it is logical or even possible to pool a public company that serves without profit with a private company that is in business for profit. It is like mixing oil and water. The two are fundamentally different. One is based on profit, and one on service."

Follows Philadelphia Fight.

It was learned yesterday that the controversy over National power policy was a direct sequel to a fight that raged for hours in the Democratic resolutions committee at Philadelphia, when the party platform was being drafted. The original draft submitted to the committee contained a Government ownership plank. This was modified by the resolutions committee, after a long battle, unrecorded in published accounts.

Named by the President yesterday to serve with Ickes on the special committee were:

Frederic A. Delano, vice chairman of the National Resources Committee; Robert E. Healy, Securities and Exchange commissioner; Morris L. Cook, Rural Electrification administrator, and Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Power Commission.

Agreed on Study.

Both Chairman Morgan and Lilienthal, of the TVA board, were reported agreed on the wisdom of the Ickes study, particularly in obviating confusion over varying Federal power rates.

The TVA is estopped for the time being from expanding its activities, under an injunction recently granted 19 private power companies, by Federal Judge John Gore, of Nashville, Tenn.

The Government's investment in Federal projects involving electric power facilities is said now to be $700,000,000, and existing plans call for expenditure of a like amount to carry present projects to completion.

Willkie Backs U. S. Parleys.

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie, president of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, today said he and his associates were eager for further Government conferences "to find a solution of the Tennessee Valley Authority problem which shall do justice to the public and the utilities."

Although inspired by the statement issued Sunday by Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, in which the TVA chairman urged a conciliatory course in TVA dealings with private utilities, Willkie's announcement said he did "not think it appropriate at this time to comment" on the statement.

Politics and People

This Inauguration Differs Vastly From Last With no Sharp Cleavage of Administrations.

By Franklyn Waltman

FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT'S first term as President of the United States today approaches its end—43 days short of the usual four years, due to the coming into operation of the Norris "lame duck" amendment to the Constitution. Tomorrow at noon the second Roosevelt term commences.

Unlike what occurred over the week-end of March 4, 1933, there will be no sharp cleavage this time between the period just ending and that about to begin; there will be no upheaval in the conduct of national affairs; no change of pace or direction; no radical departures from current policies. What happens next week could have happened last week.

WALTMAN.

And yet, many persons are anxious to know what the Roosevelt second term will bring. Lobbyists are being importuned by their clients for a prognostication of what may be expected in the next four years. Businessmen have come to Washington and they buttonhole all who might have knowledge of the situation, asking whether Mr. Roosevelt will go to the right or to the left—or seek to keep in the middle road. As Mr. Roosevelt once said, these are sophomoric terms but they carry connotations that all can understand.

It is a little difficult to understand why anyone should imagine that Mr. Roosevelt would be different in his second term than in his first—that having won an unprecedented victory in November, with his record as the issue—he should now change and head off on a new course.

There is no reason for believing Mr. Roosevelt has changed or will change. But the situation with which he is dealing has undergone a marked change and thus his approach naturally will be different.

When he embarked on his first term, the country was in a state of panic and demoralization. Its financial mechanism had come to a stop. Forces of disintegration were at work on all sides. Part of his job of bringing back recovery was psychological. In his first Inaugural address he asserted that "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself." He sought to put fight into the Nation. He did so by giving it action and more action, as he had promised in his Inaugural address.

Mr. Roosevelt during the last four years demonstrated his prowess as a showman—and the situation required showmanship. The situation has changed radically. It no longer needs spectacular showmanship but cautious, deliberate action. Instead of being primed, the national economic machine needs brakes in good working order.

Thus without turning to the right or to the left—meaningless terms, since each proposal should be considered on its merits—President Roosevelt has abandoned monetary experimentation because the situation does not require it. He has abandoned—at least in his utterances since the election—threatening words, because the viewpoint of the country on some of his social reforms has become reorientated and more favorable to them. He remains an advocate of minimum wages, maximum working hours and better conditions for labor generally.

Of those who seek to interpret the President to the country and posterity, Ernest K. Lindley perhaps is the best qualified and has the best powers of perception. Associated closely with Mr. Roosevelt for the last eight years, he has written three books about the President—has become the unofficial Roosevelt biographer.

Mr. Lindley's most recent book, "Half Way With Roosevelt," which appeared last August, has been published in a revised edition and with an added chapter—"The Next Four Years." Mr. Lindley, after gazing into the crystal, reached the conclusion Mr. Roosevelt would make a real effort in his second term to be "conciliatory." He says the President "does not really rejoice in the hostility of anybody" and prefers to be "a benevolent arbiter."

"A genuine 'era of good feeling' would be very much to Mr. Roosevelt's personal taste," Mr. Lindley reports. "He is eminently fitted to preside over such an era. There would be gains for everybody in a period of relative peace and consolidation."

But Mr. Lindley does not think the President will sacrifice his specific or implied pledges to the major groups which supported him for re-election in order to attain this "era of good feeling." He believes some of those who opposed the President must do some compromising.

"As he always has been, and as all successful political leaders, especially in democracies, must be," Mr. Lindley asserts, "Mr. Roosevelt will continue to be opportunistic as to time and method. But there is one influence to which Presidents are more likely to be fully exposed in a second term than in a first. That is the opportunity to occupy a satisfactory place in history.

"Mr. Roosevelt probably will be especially susceptible to this influence for three reasons: First, because he is extremely ambitious; second, because, he has a vivid historical sense; and, third, because circumstances have presented to him the chance to occupy a large and perhaps enduring place in American history."

Mr. Lindley sees dangers in this aspiration. But he believes Mr. Roosevelt is a realist and that "his historical ambition probably will steady him, all the more so because the mere consolidation of what he has begun would assure him a place among the great American Presidents."

Grady Will Get Important Post On League Unit

Former State Department Aide Will Serve on Economic Group.

bodiment in national policy as domestic considerations permit.

It is the hope of League officials, as reported to Washington, that the proposed raw materials committee may be able to forward a fundamental solution of the European crisis. The root difficulty is believed to lie in the economic predicament of Germany and it is argued that the situation might be immediately eased by co-operative steps to make raw material supplies more freely and securely available to that country.

The new committee will have no political mandate. It will not touch upon such questions as redistribution of colonies, nor will it recommend what pledges should be exacted from Germany in return for possible concessions to the Reich. But the committee will definitely seek to extend the Hull program of a more liberal international trade policy into the colonial sphere, so that nations without political control of raw material resources need be in no way handicapped for that reason alone.

No political connection of any kind with the League of Nations is involved in the Grady appointment. Superficially it may be regarded as no more than the continuation of a liaison established with a Geneva technical committee nearly a decade ago. Actually, however, it signifies positive American co-operation in an attempt to cut the vicious circle of progressive economic deterioration in which Germany is caught.

Because of their immense colonial empires, and their vital interest in a firmer foundation for European peace, the British and French governments have taken the lead in moves looking toward the establishment of an international raw materials committee at Geneva. But both these governments have strongly desired American co-operation in the development. They urge the mutual desirability of a concerted move by the great democracies to strengthen the economic basis of peace, and to lessen internal strains in nations which regard themselves as in the class of "have-nots."

Noted Britons Coming.

The tripartite currency stabilization agreement was the first big co-operative step in the direction of a better-ordered world economy. Now it is hoped that the proposed raw materials committee, though its work is bound to be slow and unspectacular, may carry the constructive tendency further.

In this connection new significance is seen in the appointment of M. Bonnet as French Ambassador, as well as in the forthcoming visit to the White House of Walter Runciman, who sits in the Baldwin cabinet as president of the board of trade. In addition to Mr. Runciman Sir Otto Niemeyer, director of the Bank of England and a member of the financial committee of the League of Nations, will shortly visit Washington. It is recognized that the war debt problem will have to be liquidated if a collective peace policy is to have any very positive effect.

Because of the Inauguration ceremonies here, the meeting of the League Council which will name Dr. Grady was postponed from yesterday, as originally scheduled, until Thursday. This has given rise to expectation that President Roosevelt may, in his inaugural address, say something specific regarding American co-operation in a world-wide effort to eliminate some of the economic causes of present political tensions in Europe.

Whether or not the President decides to do so, formal announcement of the Grady appointment is expected from Geneva very soon after the formal beginning of Mr. Roosevelt's second term.

Edward's Romance Hit.

Ottawa, Jan. 18 (AP).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared today he told British Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin when King Edward was on the throne that the people of Canada would not approve a marriage to Mrs. Wallis Simpson, whether or not she became queen. Prime Minister King made his statement in the Canadian House of Commons in his long-promised declaration on Edward's abdication.

Honored by Court

S. Supreme Court. She is Mrs. Genevieve T. Smith, wife of Rear Admiral Norman M. Smith, chief of the Navy Department's Bureau of Yards and Docks. And mighty thrilled over her latest honor, even if she has never put up a shingle.

Americans Given Oil Rights by Iran

Teheran, Iran, Jan. 18 (AP).—Two American companies have been given concessions for vast oil developments in Iran, including the right to build the world's longest pipeline to carry oil from Iran and Afghanistan, newspapers announced today.

Both firms are controlled by the same group that controls the Inland Exploration Co., which, according to recent London reports, obtained a 75-year concession to open 270,000 square miles of oil land in Afghanistan, east of Iran.

(That group consists of Seaboard Oil Co. and Chase, Pomeroy & Co., a private banking firm, with Seaboard the largest stockholder. J. M. Lovejoy, of New York, is president of both the Inland and Seaboard firms.)

Runciman Calls World Security Greatest Need

Head of British Board of Trade Dodges Question of U. S. Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Jan. 28.—Walter Runciman, president of the British Board of Trade, declared today the world most needed an atmosphere of security, but warned Britain would not make concessions to other powers "to buy off trouble."

Parrying all questions seeking to connect his American visit with the long discussed possibility of an Anglo-American trade treaty, the genial 66-year-old cabinet member asserted on his arrival that he and his wife are here "for a holiday."

The tall, wiry son of Lord Runciman, 90-year-old shipping magnate, took an evening train for New York, where he will be busy—socially, he added, with a smile—until the week-end, when he will be a White House guest.

Arriving in New York also this week will be Sir Otto Niemeyer, a director of the Bank of England.

Would this indicate, Runciman was asked, that he might discuss war debts with American officials?

"God forbid," he replied.

Before leaving England, the cabinet member was quoted as saying his mission was partly to do all he could to improve Anglo-American trade. Today he said this meant no talk of treaties, war debts or monetary stabilization.

As to trade in the Far East, particularly China, he declared:

"There's room enough for all in China. That is an' enoromus market."

Would England favor concessions to certain nations to insure peace?

"We can't undertake to buy off trouble," he said. "We want no enmities, but we can not bribe anyone to leave us alone. You know what that means—more and more tribute."

Security, he added, is what the world needs and the "tripartite (Britain, France and United States) monetary agreement gave an atmosphere of security that is invaluable."

Nazis to Lend Greece $54,735,000 for Arms

Athens, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Greek government completed arrangements today to borrow 6,150,000,000 drachmae ($54,735,000) from Germany to be used exclusively for buying war materials, it was disclosed by official sources. The loan is repayable in six years.

Public Affairs Academy Asked In House Bill

Government Training Unit Similar to West Point, Annapolis Sought.

Establishment of a National Academy of Public Affairs in Washington on the same plan as the United States Naval and Military academies was proposed yesterday in a bill introduced by Representative Disney (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

The new academy would provide specialized education for young persons interested in making careers in Federal Government administration or in the United States Foreign Service.

Enrollment would be limited to appointees of members of the House and the Senate and the President. Representatives would be allowed one student each year for each district and Senators two. The President could name 50 at large and from the District. Tuition and living expenses would be provided by the Government.

The bill sets up a supervisory board to govern the institution. It comprises the Secretaries of State, the Treasury, Interior, Commerce, Agriculture, and Labor.

Students are limited to those between 17 and 25 and are required to have two years of college work before being admitted.

Unlike Annapolis and West Point, the National Academy of Public Affairs would be coeducational.

Japanese Build Sea Arsenal.

Sasebo, Japan, Jan. 18 (AP).—Preceded by elaborate ceremonies conducted by Shinto ritualists, the keel of Japan's first floating arsenal was laid today, the Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported. The vessel, named the Akashi, will serve as a repair ship and will carry the most modern appliances for aiding disabled warships at sea.

Rain and Colder Are Predicted For Inaugural

100,000 Visitors Expected to Arrive Today; All Hotels Jammed.

reach its zenith when the Inaugural parade with its governors, midshipmen and cadets begins to move shortly after noon tomorrow, downtown Washington was a welter of sidewalk throngs, loud speakers being tested, street hawkers and "rubberneck wagons" yesterday and last night.

Secret Service Rehearses.

A Secret Service squadron, convoyed by four Army scout cars with angry-looking machine guns, made a trial run from the White House to the Capitol in rehearsal for any emergency.

From morning until dark, and later, groups congregated in front of the Hermitage, the reproduction of Andrew Jackson's homestead built directly in front of the White House, where President Roosevelt will review the parade.

Reports that several downtown parking lot operators plan to boost prices on Inauguration day brought immediate and bitter response from the Inaugural Committee last night.

Norman W. Baxter, assistant chairman of the committee, scored the rate increase as a "reflection on the District and imposition on out-of-town visitors."

He said that local business men had agreed not to raise prices in hotels, restaurants and parking lots and that any action to the contrary constituted a breach of promise.

A number of parking lots in the downtown restricted area are advertising reserved space at $1 per car and unreserved space at 50 cents. The $1 rate will prevail from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. Wednesday, it was announced.

Officials of several other lots—who have as yet refrained from establishing price increases were undecided last night as to Inaugural day tariffs. Many indicated their rates would remain the same and that regular patrons would be taken care of.

No Power to Regulate.

Although aroused by the reported rate increases, Baxter said "nothing can be done." Local authorities, under present laws, have no power to regulate parking lot charges.

West Point cadets, Naval Academy Roosevelt, it also was announced, West Point Cadets, Naval Academy midshipmen and members of the Coast Guard cadet corps will be granted liberty in Washington following the Inaugural parade.

The three units totaling 4,000 student service men—will be permitted to "see the sights" until 11 p. m. Wednesday. It had first been planned to entrain the cadets for home immediately following the ceremonies, but the President, seeking additional privileges for the students, obtained "liberty" consent from commandants of the three institutions.

Boy Reporter, 11, Tomorrow to Give Slant on Parade

Billy (Scoop) Hoover, 11-year-old newspaper reporter, will be the youngest radio announcer in the broadcast of the Inauguration ceremonies tomorrow.

As an N. B. C. announcer Billy will be stationed in a special booth atop the stands at the Treasury Building Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, describe the Inaugural Parade as a boy sees it.

Billy a juvenile reporter for the Parade of Youth section of the Sunday Washington Post, made the headlines of the Nation's newspapers on the return of President Roosevelt from Hyde Park to Washington following his election victory. Leaping on the running board of the President's car as it left Union Station, Billy got an exclusive post-election story from the President, which first was published in The Washington Post.

Department Stores Sell Tickets to Birthday Ball

Department stores have been added to the sales places where tickets for the President's Birthday Ball may be obtained. This was announced at a meeting of the ticket committee, held at the office of the chairman, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Although the ball is scheduled for Saturday, January 30, there already is a growing demand for tickets, members of the committee said. The Government departments, under the chairmanship of Alvin W. Hall of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, are being organized and tickets are selling rapidly. Each of the professions and businesses is organized under a sub-committee and tickets are on sale at the A. A. A., the various hotels and other spots.

Libraries to Close.

The central building of the Public Library, at Eighth and K streets northwest, and all Public Library agencies will be closed on Inauguration Day, according to an announcement made yesterday by Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian.

Even Police Courts Break Charter Precedent As Capital Is Prepared for Greatest Inaugural

When Gov. Hugh L. White and his Mississippi delegation arrived here yesterday, practically everyone aboard except Col. and Mrs. Carl Blomquist and their daughter, Joyce, shown above, made a bee-line for the Capital's points of interest. But the Blomquists—he is on the Governor's staff—had too much unpacking to do so they remained on the special train—and worked.

Per Diem Employes of Government to Get Pay for Holiday.

Plan-making entered its final stages yesterday as Washington prepared to ring up the curtain tomorrow on what promises to be the greatest Inaugural of them all in the matter of spectators.

Shattering an old tradition, the four Police Court judges announced the entire building will be closed on Inaugural day, marking the first time in the tribunal's history that it has not opened on a week day.

The precedent dates back to the granting of the charter which established the court and provided that it should be open every day of the year except Sunday. The purpose was to expedite speedy trials for persons locked up.

Individuals arrested Tuesday who are unable to post collateral or make bond will be held until Thursday morning, then brought into court. Action of the judges was motivated by a desire to have all available policemen on the streets.

Day Employes Get Pay.

Joint resolutions which will assure per diem employes of Washington Navy Yard and the District government full pay tomorrow will be introduced in the Senate and House today by chairmen of the respective District committees.

The resolutions are designed to give per diem workers the same holiday-with-pay accorded salary employes of the Federal and District governments. Similar legislation was enacted in 1929 covering the inaugural holiday on March 4.

The Capital Transit Co. placed in its street cars and buses leaflets detailing special provisions which will be in effect tomorrow. Pennsylvania avenue will be closed to traffic from 11:15 a. m. until the parade is over.

In addition to 700 Metropolitan policemen, about half the force, who will be on duty along the parade route, there will be 50 plainclothesmen, 300 selected officers from New York and Philadelphia, 63 picked detectives from Eastern cities and 20 sheriffs from nearby States.

All but three of the boxes for the Inaugural concert in Constitution Hall tomorrow night have been sold, announced Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the Inaugural committee.

The latest box purchaser was Henry L. Doherty, of New York. More than 30 State Governors, their wives and staffs will attend the program, only official entertainment offered by the committee, which is sponsoring no Inaugural ball this year.

Mrs. Roosevelt and several members of the President's family will hear the concert. The First Lady will have with her Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, mother of the President, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the war-time President.

Admiral Grayson announced the appointment of Col. John W. Oehmann, of the District National Guard; Maj. Harvey L. Miller, of the Marine Corps Reserves, and Robert J. Cottrell, of the Washington Board of Trade, as aides to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the public order committee.

The three Coast Guard cutters ordered here for the Inauguration arrived at the Navy Yard yesterday. They are the Pontchartrain, the Cayuga and the Mendota. Three hundred officers and men from the vessels will march in the parade.

The Coast Guard also will be represented by 130 cadets from the Academy at New London, Conn., who are scheduled to arrive tomorrow morning. Fifty enlisted Coast Guardsmen will be imported to act as special guards at the Treasury Building today, tomorrow and Thursday.

South Carolina Takes Mississippi's Donkey

Taking consolation in the knowledge that their State's loss is Jim Farley's gain, Mississippians here for the inaugural prepared to surrender Queenie, lady donkey mascot, today.

Queenie's loss was discussed dolefully last night at the gala banquet at the Wardman Park Hotel for Gov. Hugh L. White and the State's Congressional delegation, with Commissioner George Allen as toastmaster.

At high noon today at the Mayflower Hotel, Queenie, 90 pounds of cuteness who arrived yesterday on the Mississippians special train, will be turned over to Lieut. Gov. S. E. Harey of South Carolina in payment of an election bet.

Mississippi bet South Carolina it would poll a greater percentage of the total vote for Roosevelt but lost, 97.5 per cent to 98.3 per cent.

No sooner does he receive Queenie from Lieut. Gov. J. B. Snider of Mississippi then Harley will present the donkey to Postmaster General James A. Farley.

More Than 1,100 Police to Be Stationed Along Line of March.

Meantime special trains and cars bearing their cargo of Governors, Democratic club members, college and high school students, and so on, were arriving, many of them being met at the station or yards by yelling, flag-waving local confreres.

Some 200 Mississippians met Gov. Hugh White and his party of 105 when they arrived at the New York avenue yards. Heading the welcoming group was Senator Pat Harrison who, with Mrs. Harrison, entertained for the visitors at a reception late yesterday.

Gov. Bibb Graves of Alabama and his party of 35 were met at the train shed by representatives of the State society.

Lieut. Gov. James A. Berry led the "Oklahoma Special" into Washington. Gov. E. W. Marland remained in the State capital because the Legislature is in session. The Oklahoma and Mississippi trains were "parked" in the railroad yards, the Pullman cars serving as the visitors' homes until after the Inauguration.

The Benning and New York avenue yards will be veritable sleeper cities long before tomorrow's ceremonies begin, with dozens of special trains and cars scheduled to arrive today and tomorrow morning and be retained for housing purposes.

Among special trains and cars arriving yesterday, but not retained as "hotels," were those of Coe College, a Michigan unit; the Texas Women's Democratic Club, a Tammany Hall delegation and a Buffalo, N. Y., unit.

The special train of Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio also was released upon its arrival, likewise the eight-car special bearing Louisiana rooters. Gov. Richard W. Leche arrived in Washington several days ago.

Gov. Lewis O. Barrows, Maine's new Republican chief executive, left Augusta yesterday for the Capital, accompanied by Mrs. Barrows and Adjt. Gen. James W. Hanson, of the State National Guard.

Fascists, Reds Nearing Crisis, Goering Warns

Hitler's Aide at Private Meeting in Rome Predicts Showdown.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Jan. 18.—Prediction of a showdown in the conflict between Europe's Fascists and Communists was made by Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering in a speech here last night before a private meeting of the German Club of Rome. One of his hearers said Hitler's chief aide described Europe as divided between countries "of order, enlightenment and good faith" and those of "destruction and bloodshed."

"A great test will demonstrate which of these two will prevail in Europe," Hitler's lieutenant was quoted as having said.

German newspapermen were understood to have been warned by the Germany embassy not to mention this prediction. It was not published in the Italian press.

A report that Spain's Socialist government had naturalized foreigners fighting on its side in the civil war brought expressions of indignation in official circles tonight.

One authoritative writer, Virginio Gayda, asserted the action would facilitate the entry into Spain of more volunteers.

Pay Raise Sought For D. C. Workers

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, yesterday assured representatives of District Government employes that his measure will include District employes in its provisions to raise the salaries of all Government workers now earning less than $3,600 a year.

Hearings are expected to be scheduled by the Senate Civil Service Committee as soon as it receives a report on the bill from the Civil Service Commission.

Piniera Heads Club.

Felix Piniera has been elected president of the Filipino Club of Washington.

Other officers chosen include Gregorio Quijano, vice president; Venancio Liberato, recording secretary; Isidro Domingo, corresponding secretary; Pastor Vallesteros, treasurer, and Nicasio Rillon, sergeant at arms.

Today's Schedule

Scheduled events today preliminary to the Inauguration ceremonies of President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner are as follows:

12 noon—Luncheon for Gov. Stark of Missouri at the dining room of the Speaker of the House. Representative Cannon in charge.

12:30 p. m. to midnight on the 20th—Reception and tea at the Mayflower, by the Kentucky Democratic Club of Washington, in honor of Gov. Chandler and staff.

12:30 p. m.—Luncheon at the American Association University Women's Clubhouse, for Mississippi women.

Franco Spurns Foreign Check On Volunteers

this morning by an airplane of "unknown nationality."

The bomb missed its mark and the ship, en route from San Sebastian to Toulon, continued on its way without damage, the ministry said.

Foreign office officials said that the attacking plane was Spanish, but did not specify whether it was from the government or rebel armies. The bombing occurred off Cape San Sebastian.

Meanwhile, failure of the British plan to stem the flow of foreign volunteers to Spain appeared imminent tonight when France refused to consider Italo-German reservations affecting "indirect intervention" in the civil war.

French officials learned that the German and Italian replies to the British plan, which probably will be sent to London this week, would be identical in demanding that the proposal be extended to included, not only the problem of recduits, but indirect financial and moral aid to either Spanish faction.

Such demands could not be accepted, it was pointed out, because of the difficulty in applying them under a democratic form of government.

1,000 Fascists Killed.

Madrid, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Rebel deaths in the slowly crumbling Clinico Hospital today mounted to 1,000, loyalist officials estimated, as their troops renewed assaults on the isolated University City stronghold. Repetaed attacks failed to dislodge the famished insurgents.

Rebels Nearing Malaga.

Gibraltar, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano's southern rebel armies tonight were intrenched in Fuengirola, within sight of the towering fortress of Malaga, after another smashing drive along the Andalusian coast. The insurgents occupied the outskirts of Fuengirola, only 17 miles southwest of Malaga, and threatened to cut off the water supply of the 200,000 or more inhabitants of Spain's second greatest seaport.

Rockefeller Scion Makes Good in Job As Oilfield Worker

Houston, Tex., Jan. 18 (U.P.).—A strapping young man who worked up from common "roustabout" on an oil rig tonight prepared to move on to bigger jobs in the oil industry in New York City.

The 24-year-old 6-footer is Winthrop Rockefeller, grandson of John D. Rockefeller, sr., whose name once was almost a synonym for the oil industry. Three years' experience in the producing end of the oil business has convinced him he is ready for bigger fields.

Young Rockefeller packed his clothes tonight and bade friends good-bye. They included day laborers, well drillers, refinery technicians, chemists and office executives, all of whom considered him a "democratic and willing worker."

Woodin, Jr., Divorced In Tucson, Ariz., Action

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 18 (AP).—Superior Judge William G. Hall granted a divorce today to Mrs. Carolyn Hyde Woodin from William H. Woodin, jr., son of the late Secretary of the Treasury under President Roosevelt.

In her complaint she sought $3,000 a month alimony for the support of their 9-year-old son. Mrs. Woodin charged her husband refused to provide money for miscellaneous expenses.

WE GROW HAIR

THE above pictures of Thomas client Leo Stack show how Thomas re-grows hair even in extremely serious cases of baldness. This is an "alopecia areata" case and is considered unusually baffling by most authorities. The Thomas' have hundreds of such cases each year and have consistently, without a single failure, re-grown hair.

Loss of hair due to dandruff may make you just as bald as loss of hair from alopecia areata, or from any of the other 14 local scalp ills. Regardless as to the cause of your hair-loss, you must have highly specialized knowledge and treatment applied if you are to expect satisfactory results. The Thomas know how to treat effectively all of the 14 local causes of baldness. They know how to end dandruff, how to stop falling hair, and how to promote hair growth on thin and bald spots.

Avail yourself of this extensive knowledge of hair and scalp science by consulting a Thomas specialist today. Without charge or obligation he'll gladly examine your scalp and advise you. You are always welcome.

President Plans Parley on High Court's Power

Group Will Seek Tribunal More in Accord With New Deal's Acts.

Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, likewise favors such a restrictive act.

"That is one way we can obtain legislation we have been seeking," Minton said yesterday.

It was pointed out that had such a limitation been in effect throughout the New Deal, the agricultural adjustment act, the Guffey coal act and the railroad retirement act would not have been invalidated. NRA, however, was killed by a unanimous decision of the court, and the "hot oil" regulation clause was struck down by an 8-to-1 division.

House Debate Rages.

Senator Minton's announcement came while a debate was raging in the House over the Administration's attitude toward the Supreme Court.

In his recent state-of-the-Union message to Congress, President Roosevelt expressed the view that a Constitutional amendment was not necessary to give Congress power to regulate in social welfare matters, but he called for a "liberal" interpretation of the Constitution. At the time of the NRA decision he declared it had returned the Nation to the "horse and buggy" days.

Yesterday Representative Robert Luce, Republican, of Massachusetts, declared he was "amazed" at the Administration's stand, and declared it was the duty of the court "to declare what the Constitution means."

Representative William P. Connery, Democrat, of the same State, replied that Luce was repeating Republican arguments that already had been "repudiated" in the last election.

Luce said the court should not be swayed by "press or public editors or electors, preachers or politicians, reformers or reactionaries."

Connery asked if the President did not ask the court "to give a more enlightened interpretation of the Constitution."

Intelligence Questioned.

"A more intelligent interpretation," Luce replied. "Don't you think the court uses intelligence?"

"No, personally," said the Bay State Democrat, "I don't think the court used much intelligence in many of its opinions."

Senator Norris has been planning to preside over another conference "on constitutional amendment," at which the Supreme Court decisions would be the topic of "liberals." Whether the meeting would be abandoned in view of the President's new plans was not made known at once.

Recent suggestions for overcoming the apparently hostile court majority on New Deal objectives have varied from a constitutional amendment to permitting several of the justices past 70 years of age to retire on full pay in order that "liberals" might replace them, or increasing the size of the court to permit the President to obtain a majority favorable to his plans.

Holds Situation Doubtful.

Of the latter two proposals, Minton said:

"The trouble is that you can't be sure the new members will stay where they are put. You may put a man in a liberal stall, only to have him turn up later in a conservative stall. However, I think it might be a good idea to increase the membership, because the present members are overworked."

In addition to the Supreme Court deadlock, the President's conference likely will discuss the power of lower Federal courts to pass on the constitutionality of Federal laws and to join enforcement of such measures. At present scores of injunctions have been issued in lower courts holding up enforcement of the Wagner labor disputes, the railroad retirement act, the Tennessee Valley act to an extent, the social security act and others.

New Assistant Naval Secretary Takes Oath

such orders demanding compliance with wage and hour standards.

"Quite obviously there must be some way of getting our material," Assistant Secretary Edison stated, "and I am sure there will be a way of procuring material for the Navy. * * * There must be some perfectly reasonable, sane solution."

He added that the problem was not immediately pressing, but unless raw materials are obtained in the near future thousands of navy yard and industrial concern employes will face unemployment.

The Assistant Secretary refused to discuss the possibility of invoking the "escape clause" whereby producers of materials needed for emergencies are exempted from provisions of the act.

The 45-year-old new Assistant Secretary, an enthusiastic sailor, was appointed by the President last November 18. An early New Dealer, he often served the President in minor capacities, and was at one time mentioned for the post of Federal Housing administrator. He served in the NRA organization as New Jersey State director of the National Emergency Council.

A resident of West Orange, N. J., he was urged by New Jersey Democrats to run for United States Senator this fall.

Son of the famous inventor, he managed the 33 companies founded on his father's inventions. He was educated at Carteret Academy, Hotchkiss and M. I. T.

Pressing Charge On Van Devanter Is Called 'Duty'

Approval of the intention of the United States Biological Survey to press a charge against Supreme Court Justice Willis Van Devanter for hunting without first procuring a $1 "duck" stamp was expressed yesterday by M. D. Hart, secretary of the Virginia Commission on Game and Inland Fisheries.

"The Federal bureau is only doing its plain duty," asserted Hart.

Meanwhile, George E. King, the Federal game warden who found the jurist hunting without the stamp, said the experience was proving embarrassing to both of them.

He said he filed "an affidavit" on which the Biological Survey has asked that a Federal hunting violation charge be pressed against the 77-year-old justice.

Six of Discovery's Crew Lost on Northern Islands

London, Jan. 18 (AP).—Six members of the crew of the British Antarctic survey ship Discovery II were reported missing today on King George Island, south of the Shetland Islands in the North Atlantic.

Lieut. L. C. Hill, commander of the Discovery, said the men landed some time ago at Esther Harbor and subsequently disappeared. Whaling vessels and the British cruiser Ajax were instructed to watch for the men. The Discovery II, with a crew of 50, left London in October to engage in whaling research.

2 Artists Appointed To Fine Arts Units

The appointments of Paul Manship and William F. Lamb and reappointment of Eugene Savage to the Fine Arts Commission was announced yesterday by President Roosevelt. Each is for a four-year term.

Manship, among the foremost of American sculptors, will take the place of Lee Lawrie. Lamb, a member of the New York firm of Shreve, Lamb & Harmon, which designed the Empire State Building, will succeed John M. Howells. Savage is a professor of painting at Yale University.

Lamb formerly was an associate of Thomas Hastings, New York architect, who drew plans for the Arlington Amphitheater, the Senate Office Building and the old House Office Building.

Dr. Charles Moore is chairman of the Fine Arts Commission.

Hopkins' Letter Stills Demand For Aid Fund

WPA Pledge to Help Northwest Satisfied Bloc Asking Increased Relief.

By the Associated Press.

Demands in Congress for an immediate relief appropriation much larger than that proposed by President Roosevelt abated somewhat yesterday because the WPA promised to increase relief quotas in the Northwest.

Some Northwestern legislators who have been fighting for the larger appropriation said they were satisfied with concessions outlined in a letter from Harry L. Hopkins, the Works Progress administrator.

They interpreted Hopkins' letter to mean WPA quotas will be increased wherever necessary to take care of destitute families who have moved into the Northwest from drought-damaged States.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Washington, said the letter was broad enough also to include increased relief burdens caused by the maritime strike.

Appear Satisfied.

Hopkins' letter was read to the group by Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), of the House Appropriations Committee.

Representative O'Connor (Democrat), Montana, member of the Northwestern delegation which went before a sub-committee to demand a substantial increase in the $790,000,000 fund proposed by Mr. Roosevelt to finance relief for the next five months, expressed belief afterward Hopkins will "meet the situation."

Earlier in the day he had declared there would be "hell to pay" on the House floor if the sub-committee did not increase the President's figure.

Solution Foreseen.

Some Congressmen said they understood funds already available in the Resettlement Administration would enable it to meet such a large part of the rural relief problem that WPA quotas could be increased in some instances without appropriating more than the President proposed.

Senator Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, a leader of the Northwestern bloc, said he was pleased with the Hopkins letter and believed the situation "would work out."

Third Brother Sets Out On Hunt for Kingsleys

Managua, Nicaragua, Jan. 18 (AP).—A young American, aided by United States Army and Nicaraguan National Guard fliers, searched today for his two missing brothers—both believed lost when their planes crashed in Central American jungles.

The missing men are W. W. Kingsley, former resident of Glendale, Calif., and operator of the Nicaraguan - Atlantic Coast Airways, who disappeared on a flight to the Bonanza mines last Wednesday, and his brother, Gordon, lost last Saturday in the search that followed. The third brother, Marvin, continued the hunt today, flying with U. S. Army pilots who came from the Canal Zone.

George Approves Water.

London, Jan. 18 (AP).—One may drink King George's VI's health in water. The monarch so informed the London Temperance Association today. His father and his brother, Edward VIII, had likewise assured prohibitionists "a loyal toast will be honored with equal acceptance in water or any other nonalcoholic beverage."

Grocery Manager Is Suicide at Store

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald after an investigation of the death of Clarence N. Burton, 38, manager of a chain grocery store in the 5500 block of Connecticut avenue northwest.

Four employes found Burton in the refrigerator of the store with the top of his head blown off. A shotgun was lying beside him.

Burton, who lived at 3817 Legation street northwest, left his home about 6:30 a. m., occupants of the house said. Half an hour later the employes found the doors to the store locked from the inside.

Summoning the campany's supervisor, he in turn called the police who forced the door. Inside a note addressed reading: "Father—J. T. Burton, Monday Point, Va." was found written on a piece of cardboard.

Friends told police the man was estranged from his wife.

Delano Offers Housing Plan To Help Cities

2-Point Program Would Help Municipalities to Buy Land.

By the United Press.

A new Federal housing program backed by high officials in four Government agencies has been prepared by Frederick A. Delano, chairman of the central housing committee, it was learned last night.

Delano, who is President Roosevelt's uncle, has worked out a plan which may serve as the basis for an amendment to the Wagner housing bill.

The program has been submitted to Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, author of the $1,000,000,000 Federal housing bill introduced at the last Congress. He will consider the plan after he returns to the Capital today.

Two Major Points.

In brief, Delano and the committee recommend two cardinal points:

1. Federal assistance to municipalities in a broadscale land-purchasing program.

2. Administration of national housing developments by "a permanent authority whose members are chosen on other grounds than those of party patronage."

The committee consists of heads of the eight Federal agencies interested in housing.

The land-purchasing program is based on a study of foreign precedents, notably in Sweden and Great Britain. Delano's proposal says:

Delano Statement.

"It would be only reasonable for the Federal Government to assist local governments to purchase land for two purposes: First, to help municipalities provide low-rent housing for families unable to afford shelter of minimum standards and, second, to stabilize the value of low-cost residential neighborhoods wherever protection by zoning regulations is incomplete, thus promoting simultaneously the home-building industry and sound community planning.

"With these ends in mind, the following policy is suggested:

"The Federal Government might properly offer to pay a certain percentage of the cost of acquisition of land by municipalities, on condition that the municipality, in using such land, should take suitable precautions to insure the sound development of the neighborhood. * * *

Program Outlined.

"The municipality, usually through a housing authority, might properly purchase entire neighborhoods in blighted areas or perhaps in suburban or undeveloped territory."

These steps are recommended to municipalities after acquisition of new land: (1) Direct municipal housing; (2) reclamation of slum areas; (3) renovation of buildings in "blighted areas."

U. S. Paris Consul In War-Time Dies

Paris (Tuesday), Jan. 19 (AP).—Alexander M. Thackara, war-time American consul-general in Paris, died early today of pneumonia in the American Hospital at Neuilly. He was 88.

At his bedside were his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Cauldwell, of Paris.

Mrs. Thackara, daughter of Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman, died in 1915.

Thackara, whose work as United States consul general in Paris endeared him to thousands of distressed Americans in the early days of the World War, retired from the consular service in 1924.

In 1934 he was given the Croix de Guerre, with citation, awarded him by Marshal Joseph Joffre in 1920. A joint House resolution permitted him to receive the decoration.

Mt. Rainier Widens Boundary of Town

Extension of the town's boundary lines to include a valuable real estate development to the northwest, was approved at a meeting of the Mount Rainier mayor and council in the municipal building last night.

The area which the town proposes to incorporate is bounded on the west by the District line, on the north by Queens Chapel road, on the east by Thirtieth street and on the south by Grape street.

The council also approved Dolby's bill for a referendum on sale of liquor within the town limits.

$3,100 Ordered Paid In Lee Highway Case

Staunton, Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—An order has been entered in Augusta Circuit Court confirming a commissioners' report fixing damages due A. M. Prichard in the highway condemnation case which he carried unsuccessfully to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

The commissioners allowed Prichard $3,100 for a strip of land fronting on the Lee highway, south of the Staunton corporate limits. The clerk of the court was directed to turn the sum over to the owner.

Scope of Fellowship Fund Stressed By Association of University Women

Celebration Held Prior to Announcement of 12 Awards.

The wide scope of the Fellowship fund of the American Association of University Women was stressed yesterday at the celebration of Fellowship Day at the American Association of University Women headquarters.

The celebration was in preparation for the meeting of the national committee, to be on Friday and Saturday when 12 fellowship awards will be made to women graduate students for research and study. Up to the present time the organization has awarded 288 fellowships.

A part of the celebration was the tea at the American Association of University Women. Mrs. Richard Hogue, president of the Washington branch, and Mrs. David L. Wing, chairman of the Fellowship endowment fund, received.

The Washington fellowship will be designated as Latin American fellowship when sufficient funds have been raised for the endowment. Washington is proud of the fact that $9,000 has been raised for this fund, the highest per capita fund of any club in the country.

The creative writing group met at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women last night under the leadership of Mrs. W. L. Bossart.

The first of the hosts of Democratic women from all over the country for the Inauguration tomorrow arrived in Washington yesterday for the opening session of the Women's National Democratic Clubs conference at the national headquarters on New Hampshire avenue.

The members of the registration committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. E. C. Seibert were at the club early yesterday morning to register the Democratic women as they came in. This committee is composed of Mrs. Raymond Anderson, Mrs. Pauline Byrd, Mrs. T. M. Sebrell, Mrs. J. Craig Peacock, Miss Margaret Ayers, Mrs. W. L. Beale, Miss Sue White, Mrs. J. Brent Park, Miss Florence Armstrong, Mrs. Rene Jones Taylor, Mrs. Allen Gifford, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Dwight Webb, Miss Ethel Weaver, Miss Ruth Oberly, Mrs. Preston Delano, Mrs. Charles Estes, Mrs. F. C. Brown, Mrs. Norman Underwood and Mrs. E. B. Prettyman.

The committees in charge are determined that the visiting Democratic women will have plenty of opportunity to see the sights and Washington tours have been arranged under the direction of Mrs. James T. Newton, assisted by Mrs. Howell Morehead, Mrs. E. R. Preston, Mrs. J. W. Gravely, Mrs. Brett Dano and Mrs. W. H. White.

Many of the out-of-town delegates attended the luncheon yesterday when Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, discussed the mandate of the people in the last Presidential election.

The opening of a lecture course on the Constitution at 11 a. m. by Ellis Meredith, is also of great interest to the out-of-town Democratic women.

The Dutch Treat Club will hold its meeting at the La Paree restaurant tomorrow at 7 p. m. The guest speaker will be Mr. Eric Schuler, formerly of the famous Dutch Treat Club of New York City and now with the copyright office, Library of Congress. Mr. Schuler will give a short sketch of the Dutch Treat Club of New York and will follow it with a short talk on "copyright laws."

Members of the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Phi Delta, legal sorority, have arranged a special visit to the Supreme Court libraries, the Law Library and rare book collection of the Library of Congress, and the Supreme Court of the United States on Saturday afternoon.

Miss Olive Jack, assistant chief law librarian of the Library of Congress and chairman of the committee on arrangements, will entertain the members of the chapter at luncheon in the Supreme Court Building lunchroom immediately preceding the visit to the libraries.

The Washington section of the National Council of Jewish Women is sponsoring a preview of the Civic Theater's production of Sinclair Lewis' dramatized "It Can't Happen Here," tonight, the eve of Inauguration. The regular run of the play will begin Inauguration night, but the preview, while complete as to content, will also show the mechanics and particulars of a last dress rehearsal. Sinclair Lewis, who is expected in town for the Inauguration, is expected to "look in" on this last rehearsal. This play has been developed as a WPA project in many cities and in several languages. The Civic Theater and the council will share in the benefits of the preview. Mrs. David Davis, Mrs. Isidore Kahn and Mrs. Morris Gewirz are in charge of this committee.

MRS. LLOYD C. STARK, who with Gov. Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri and his staff will be honored guests at the Missouri State Society Inaugural reception Wednesday night at the Willard.

The contemporary Jewish affairs group of the council met at luncheon at Harvey's yesterday. Mrs. Lawrence Koneigsberger was chairman of arrangements. Mrs. Jennie O. Berliner, who has just returned from South America, spoke on the Inter-American conclave recently held in Buenos Aires. She was a delegate of the National Women's Council of the United States.

Many New Schools To Open for Young Nazi 'Career Men'

Munich, Germany, Jan. 18 (AP).—A great Nazi educational project embracing a series of "Adolf Hitler Schools" was disclosed today in a decree signed by the German Reichsfuehrer.

The project, drafted by Baldru von Schirach, Hitler youth leader, and Robert Ley, Nazi trades union commissioner, will make the schools "units of the Hitler youth movement, which will be responsible for their conduct," a statement said.

They will all bear Adolf Hitler's name.

Von Schirach and Ley announced "standardized curricula" would be provided in the schools and that the age of admission would be 12 years.

There will be six classes and tuition will be free.

Boys "with distinguished records" in the youth movement will be eligible, the statement said, and those passing the final examinations will be in line for "any career in the party and state services."

Civil War Veteran Dies in Round Hill

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 18.—Dr. J. E. Copeland, 91, Mason for 67 years and last surviving Confederate veteran in Loudoun County, died at his home in Round Hill last night.

'Dutch Schultz' Gang Tried for Extortion

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Nine men acused as theorists and described by authorities as inheritors of the criminal syndicate of the late Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer, were brought to trial today by Thomas E. Dewey, young rackets prosecutor, as the extorters of $1,000,000 a year or more from New York restaurant men.

Late in the day, to the apparent surprise of defense counsel, Louis Beicher, one of the defendants, pleaded guilty to the long indictment.

'Dog Curfew' Sought To Halt Canine Howls

Los Angeles, Jan. 18 (AP).—A proposed "dog curfew"—it would make barking, growling or moon-howling after 10 p. m. a jail offense—drew the serious attention of the city council today, much to the dismay of alarmed dog owners.

"It's serious," declared J. G. Lindsey, executive secretary of The Tailwagger Foundation, an organization of dog lovers, as he rallied opposition to the ordinance.

Under the measure, which sponsors said might be extended to cover the nocturnal howling of cats, penalties of a $500 fine, six months in jail, or both, are provided—to be exacted against the owner of the offending pet.

Sheriff Also Asks Shakeup in Police For Anne Arundel

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 18 (AP).—Sheriff Joseph W. Alton today joined the grand jury in recommending a reorganization of the Anne Arundel County police force.

The jury, in its final report to the court, recently suggested the appointment of a police commissioner, the dismissal of all "special officers," patrol cars for outlying districts and a system of employing and administering the force.

"There are a larger number of houses being robbed weekly at this time than at time before in the history of Anne Arundel County," the sheriff said.

"The lack of protection in this county does not lie in the lack of appropriation, but to the lack of organization among the officers."

Fire in Australia.

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 18 (AP). A $2,500,000 fire spread through 5 acres of wooden buildings at the Victoria docks today—the hottest day of the Australian summer.

Mattson Killer Is Now Hunted In Los Angeles

Two Suspects Questioned as Chase Is Shifted to Southern California.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 18.—Headed by scholarly Harold Nathan, ace of the Charles Mattson case manhunt, Federal agents concentrated their activities tonight in southern California, where two men were questioned in the kidnap-slaying of the 10-year-old boy.

Nathan, chief field agent from the Bureau of Investigation, arrived last night by airplane from Tacoma and conferred with J. H. Hanson, head of the Los Angeles office.

A reliable source at Everett, Wash., near where the boy's beaten body was found, said a stab wound in Charles' back penetrated a lung cavity, but left no blood there. The autopsy surgeons were said to have judged from this fact that the wound was inflicted after the boy had died of a head wound.

The informant said it was "definitely determined" the wound was not accidentally inflicted. He did not say what evidence supported this conclusion.

He added that any fingerprints in the possession of Federal agents must have come from the ransom notes. No prints were found on the body, he said.

At Everett, the Federal agents, assited by some 50 State patrolmen and other officers, worked from county engineers' maps in their methodical search of the countryside surrounding the spot where Charles' body was found frozen a week ago today. Half a dozen shacks and caves have been examined.

One of the men questioned here was picked up in a hobo jungle near Culver City. He said he was from Texas.

Officials reported they found a boy's sweater and newspaper clippings of the Mattson case in the man's knapsack. He has a heavy black beard and is of the same general build as the Mattson kidnaper as described by the Bureau of Investigation, said officials. The other was held in the Compton Jail. Officials said he was a former convict.

Cafe Here Robbed By Armed Bandit

An armed bandit last night held-up and robbed the Crescent Cafe, at 723 Fourteenth street northwest of an undetermined amount as 50 patrons sat by and watched.

Rushing int othe cafe, the hold-up man pressed a gun into the back of pretty Sally Fontaine, 23, of 1443 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and said: "hand it over, lady." Before she had a chance to reply he scooped up the contents of the cash regester and fled.

Witnesses said the man, who was wearing a brown overcoat and hat, jumped into a waiting taxicab in front of the restaurant.

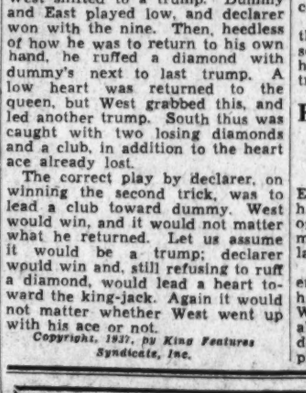
MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

Avoiding a Pitfall.

The essential difference between the play of an expert and that of a novice is that the former plays his entire campaign at the very first trick, and the latter regards each trick as an individual unit. In a manner of speaking, "he lives for the day and lets tomorrow take care of itself."

I recently saw a novice make a hash of the following hand in which the contract would have been ironclad by proper planning.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Double	Redouble	2 ◇
2 ♠	3 ◇	4 ♣	Pass
4 ♠	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

Obviously, South's bidding was fantastic. His opening bid, although slightly shaded, was not really bad; in fact, a great many experts would open his particular hand with a spade bid, but they would not voluntarily rebid to show better than minimum strength over East's forced takeout of two diamonds. North should not have bid four clubs—three spades after South's rebid would have been preferable, but the final contract would have been the same anyway.

It is strange to note that this contract, arrived at so rashly, was actually ice-cold on the particular lay of cards existing. But South did not make it!

The diamond ace was opened, and West shifted to a trump. Dummy and East played low, and declarer won with the nine. Then, heedless of how he was to return to his own hand, he ruffed a diamond with dummy's next to last trump. A low heart was returned to the queen, but West grabbed this, and led another trump. South thus was caught with two losing diamonds and a club, in addition to the heart ace already lost.

The correct play by declarer, on winning the second trick, was to lead a club toward dummy. West would win, and it would not matter what he returned. Let us assume it would be a trump; declarer would win and, still refusing to ruff a diamond, would lead a heart toward the king-jack. Again it would not matter whether West went up with his ace or not.

Head of Barbers' Union, 4 Others Held in Vandalism

The president of the local barber's union, the business manager and three other men were arrested yesterday and charged with depredations committed on six barber shops since November last year.

All of the men were charged with conspiracy to violate the law prohibiting destroying or defacing public or private property. They will be arraigned in Police Court this morning for a preliminary hearing.

Those arrested are Phillip Gelfo, 35, of 714 Quackenbos street northwest, president of the union; Sam G. Hambrick, 27, of 1101 Euclid street northwest, business manager of the union; two barbers, Edwin Lowe, 52, of 5506 Second street northwest; William J. Wise, 46, of 1343 H street northwest, and Charles Crossley, 24, of 135 Longfellow street northwest, a soda dispenser.

Lowe and Crossley signed statements admitting they had thrown stench bombs into six tonsorial parlors and smashed show windows in an equal number. Lowe, the owner of a barber shop at the Second street address, said he committed the acts "for the money."

He said he received $20 for each bomb that was tossed into non-union shops and $10 for each window that was broken. In his statement he implicated Gelfo and Hambrick.

O.E.S. Grand Unit Installs Officers

Offices of the grand chapter, Order of the Eastern Star of the District, were installed last night at the closing session of the conclave at the Willard Hotel.

Mrs. Elizabeth W. Rhine became grand matron, succeeding Mrs. Louise K. Kreglow, and Dr. Victor B. Rench succeeded Needham C. Turnage as grand patron.

Other officers installed were Mrs. Helen D. Robbins, associate grand matron; Harry J. Schmidt, associate grand patron; Mrs. Rose A. Yost, grand secretary; Mrs. Lillie McKenzie, grand treasurer; Mrs. Ruth S. Cromelin, grand conductress; Mrs. Minnie J. Burdine, associate grand conductress.

Mrs. Yost was re-elected for her thirty-eighth consecutive term as secretary, and Mrs. McKenzie for her twelfth consecutive term as treasurer.

Edward Still Unsure Of Honeymoon Plans

Enzefeld, Austria, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Edward, Duke of Windsor, today hired an Austrian valet at a salary of 300 Austrian schillings ($56) a month, but told him the job might last only until the end of April.

He said the same to a chauffeur employed last week, indicating that his honeymoon plans with Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, who probably will receive her final divorce decree April 25, have not been completed.

tracks and warning of pickets at the Guide Lamp plant at Anderson following evacuation there, and with violating the truce in agreeing to negotiate with the Flint Alliance.

Knudsen's statement handed to the union men said in part:

"Workers in the parts department of Cadillac were notified to report Monday in accordance with representations * * * agreed to by Mr. Mortimer over the telephone Saturday.

"As to the Anderson situation, we quote telegram just received from Harry R. Baldwin, mayor (saying peaceful picketing was being permitted) * * *

"With reference to the Flint Alliance * * * we have not at Lansing or anywhere else made a guarantee that we would not talk to anybody other than representatives of United Automobile Workers of America. * * *

"The coproation * * * is not responsible for the civic authorities in Anderson, who clearly acted as they had a right to do, nor for the Flint Alliance."

In reply the union issued a statement saying:

"Mr. Mortimer's agreement over the phone was in respect only to certain office workers, and no agreement or arrangement was made with the company about either parts or distribution workers. * * *

"Mayor Baldwin's telegram bears out our statement that pickets were warned against refusing to allow anyone to enter or leave the guide lamp plant, showing that he was aware of company intentions of sending people into the plant, contrary to the agreement. * * *

"In respect to the Flint Alliance, the published communications show conclusively that the General Motors Corporation agreed to negotiate with another group before sitting down to negotiate with the union as one of the main points at issue, recognition of the U. A. W. A. as sole collective bargaining agency for General Motors employes. This is a direct violation of the agreement, presuming to remove from negotiation a point on which the corporation had agreed to negotiate with the union."

Gov. Murphy, before leaving for Washington, said, in response to an inquiry on his attitude toward the Flint Alliance, "It will be helpful if civic and other organizations will hold themselves in the background."

He said his trip was "more in the line of duty than to attend the Inauguration" of President Roosevelt and that he might return before the ceremonies if developments here required his presence.

He continued: "These difficulties in the days of mass production are no longer private affairs. The Government must play a helpful part.

"Disorder, lawlessness and widespread suffering that will follow—the Government simply cannot tolerate.

Troops Ordered to Stay.

"I enjoin everybody to be calm and steady. Bad judgment, intolerance and unnecessary display of strength only complicate things. There is a solution and it will be found, and while I am Governor it won't be by violence. It is going to be around a conference table.

"There is not a possibility of authority being drawn into the dispute on one side or another. The Government will get food and assistance to those who need it. That is the policy in this State."

The Governor said National Guard troops at Flint had been directed to stay out of the strike area.

In response to a question, he said that "John Doe warrants are not helpful in a situation of this kind." Three hundred such warrants have been issued in Flint for strikers, but have neither been served nor dismissed.

Transit Strike Continues.

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 18 (AP).—The upturned thumb of the hitchhiker was popular today in this industrial city, left without street car or bus service by a strike of operators and shopmen.

Citizens went to and from work as best they could, many "thumbing" the air transportation. Others had to walk; some rode in taxicabs. No moves came either from the officials or the striking employes of the Indiana Railroad Co. to end the strike which has tied up the company's Terre Haute lines since yesterday.

Cabinet Posts Predicted Safe From Shakeup

McNutt Is Slated for War Portfolio, Capitol Observers Say.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt will enter his second term with his present Cabinet intact, barring unforeseen developments.

What is more, those close to him predict he will make no wholesale changes afterward.

One Cabinet member, Secretary of War Woodring, is serving temporarily, and informed observers expect a permanent appointment to be made early in the President's second term.

Friends of James A. Farley say he will be reappointed Postmaster General and will serve until he has made a satisfactory private business connection. They insist he has no intention of quitting immediately, despite contentions of Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, and some other members of Congress that he should not head a Government agency while continuing as chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

In predicting recently there will be no general change in the present Cabinet line-up, one high official said the President did not believe in "shake-ups."

Capitol observers generally agreed that, with the possible exception of a change at the War Department, no shift will be made until the President's plan for reorganizing the Government has been passed upon by Congress.

Mr. Roosevelt has recommended creation of two new Cabinet posts—a Secretary of Public Works and a Secretary of Social Welfare. He also has proposed a widespread realignment of departmental functions.

The President has not included publicly his choice for Secretary of War, but the name of former Gov. Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, has been mentioned often in speculation regarding a successor to Woodring. McNutt's term as Governor expired a few days ago.

Ousted Judge Opens Appeal In High Court

Ritter Attacks Impeachment Powers of Senate in New Brief.

By the Associated Press.

Halsted L. Ritter, ousted Federal judge for the Southern District of Florida, attacked in the Supreme Court yesterday the right of the Senate to remove him from office.

Ritter was removed after being found guilty of "high crimes and misdemeanors," and "for bringing the court into disrepute."

His petition to the Supreme Court was in the form of an appeal from the United States Court of Claims, which dismissed his suit for want of jurisdiction.

Ritter said his action was based on the "invalidity and nullity of the judgment entered by the court of impeachment."

He asked the court to determine whether "Section 3, Article 1 of the Constitution gives the Senate illimitable and omnipotent power to remove civil officers, and whether the Court of Claims has jurisdiction to entertain his claim for salary due a wrongfully removed officer."

Among the charges heard against Ritter were allegations that he accepted gratuities from a former law partner and others.

The Senate acquitted him on six counts and convicted him on a seventh and last count. Ritter contended this conviction was improper because the seventh count was a combination of the other charges on which he had been acquitted.

Attorney General Paul A. Dever of Massachusetts during the day asked the court yesterday to stay out of the controversy raised by Howes Brothers Co., of Boston, over constitutionality of the Federal Social Security act. The company contended in asking the court to pass upon the law, that validity of the Massachusetts unemployment insurance law hinged upon constitutionality of the Federal statute. The two laws supplement each other in providing benefits for the jobless.

Dever said no Federal question was involved since the basis of the Howes Brothers attack was its claim that contributions required under the State law are invalid.

The court dismissed today an appeal by the City Bus Co., operators of bus lines in Gulfport, Biloxi, Long Beach and Pass Christian, Miss., in an effort to escape payment to the State of a highway use tax of $7,502. It refused to review a judgment against the bus company by the Mississippi Supreme Court.

Court Delays Decisions.

S. H. Kress & Co. failed in its effort to escape payment of $20,000 damages to Dr. W. P. Reaves, of Greensboro, N. C., whose house was damaged during the excavation of store property on an adjoining lot, when the tribunal refused to pass upon a judgment against Kress by the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals.

The court postponed, at least until February 1, a ruling on constitutionality of the Washington law establishing minimum wages for women, and any decision on whether the 1933 resolution prohibiting payment of obligations in gold applied to bullion as well as to coin.

The justices met for only a few minutes and then adjourned for two weeks without announcing a single decision.

Dr. A. L. Oberle, Expert on Oil, Dies in Hospital

Technologist Held Many Patents Dealing With Petroleum Processes.

Dr. Alfred L. Oberle, 54, petroleum technologist and a former member of the Society of American Military Engineers, died in Emergency Hospital late Sunday night, shortly after he was found unconscious in the basement of his residence at 1915 Thirty-seventh street northwest.

After performing an autopsy, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said cause of death could not be determined until chemical analysis had been completed. Dr. Oberle was found unconscious by his wife, Mrs. Grace Oberle, who took him to the hospital, Dr. MacDonald said.

Numerous patents on petroleum processes were held by Dr. Oberle. Most of these were obtained after 1931.

In 1932 and 1933, according to the records of the Patent Office, the scientist secured patents on a process for making anti-knock gas. He also had invented a process and apparatus for heating petroleum jelly, described as an economical method of distilling oil and other by-products.

Dr. Oberle also obtained in 1933, a patent for a new process for producing carbonaceous material for producing by-products from the residue after the petroleum is distilled.

Other phases of his work had to do with several types of carbons, such as decolorizing, medicinal, gas mask and collodial carbons.

Budapest Quartet Will Appear Here

Under provisions of the Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress, the Roth Quartet, of Budapest (Feri Roth, Jeno Antal, Ferenc Molnar and Janos Scholz), will give two concerts in the chamber of music auditorium Wednesday, January 27, at 8:45 p. m., and Friday, January 29, at 3:30 p. m.

Tickets may be obtained by written application to the music division, accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope. No telephone requests can be accepted and no tickets can be given to those calling in person.

The Wednesday program will be devoted to three works by Franz Schubert: The A minor quartet, Op. 29; the piona trio in B flat, Op. 99, and the violoncello. The Friday program will contain Debussy's quartet, Op. 10; Schuman's quartet in A minor, Op. 41, and Erno von Dohnanyi's piano quartet in C minor, Op. 1.

Ex-Senator Carey Rites Tomorrow

Cheyenne, Wyo., Jan. 18 (AP).—Wyoming tonight prepared for the funeral of former Republican Senator Robert D. Carey, who died yesterday following a heart attack. Services will be Wednesday afternaan at St. Mark's Episcopal Church here.

Wyoming legislative leaders announced both houses would adjourn during the funeral in honor of the man who spent many years as Senator and Governor. Carye, born here 58 years ago, died while visiting two nieces, en route to his ranch at Careyhurst from El Paso, Tex.

Messages of sympathy came to the family from Washington, where Democrats and Republicans joined in expressing sorrow over the death.

Canadian Convicts Returned to Cells

Guelph, Ontario, Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Tear gas supplies were exhausted today, giving officials of the big Ontario Reformatory and police a problem of maintaining order among nearly 700 still excited youths and men who wrecked and burned a large part of the prison and a night of wild disorder, now herded back into close packed cells. Last night and today tear gas had been the most effective weapon.

Throughout western and central Ontario the hunt went on for 30 convicts still at large. Others of the estimated 100 to 150 who got away during the rioting last night were in confinement again.

Laborite Leader Dies.

London, Jan. 18 (AP).—Joseph Compton, 56, a member of the House of Commons and former chairman of the Labor Party, died today. Compton, a Laborite from Manchester, was assistant secretary of the National Union of Vehicle Builders.

Fat Girl Laughs and Grows Slim

Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

Here's a way to get rid of ugly fat that works hand in hand with Nature. Millions of people are losing millions of pounds of flabby flesh and getting back slender figures, without the need of starvation diets or back-breaking exercises.

Medical science has discovered that one of the causes of too much fat lies in a little gland. Doctors correct this condition by feeding this little gland the substance it lacks—and Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a famous medical laboratory. Their formula is published in every package so you know what you are taking.

So don't waste time and money with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Go to your druggist today and get a box of Marmola. Try this simple, easy way to get rid of excess fat.

Tombstone Mourns Its 'Lynching Limb'

Tombstone, Ariz., Jan. 18 (AP).—Mournful old-timers watched Marshal Hal Smith haul away the "lynching limb" today, and decide dthat placid, unexciting old age is upon Tombstone, ribald, rip-roaring youngsters of the old West.

Relic of the eighties, when horse theives and killers died on a rope in its grim shodow, the limb was chopped down on order of the town council—because it interfered with hucksters' wagons

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Song recital by Helen Jepson (Victor Ernest, accompanist), and Ezio Pinza (Edwin MacArthur, accompanist), in Mayflower Hotel ballroom Monday morning. Program: "Non piu andrai" from "Le Nozze di Figaro" (Mozart), "Alma mia" (Handel), "Lasciatemi morire" (Monteverde), "O bellissimi capelli" (Falconieri), "Che fiero costume" (Legrenzi), "Fiocca la neve" (Cimara), "Ultima Canzone" (Tosti), "Vous qui faites l'endormie" from "Faust" (Gounod), sung by Mr. Pinza; "Depuis le jour" from "Louise" (Charpentier), "Nocturne" (Franck), "Nicolette" (Ravel), "D'une Prison" (Faure), "La fille aux cheveux de lin" (Marguerite Canal), "Invocation" (Kramer), "Hey Diddle Diddle" (Hughes), "Lullaby" (Saminski), "Geschichten aus dem Wienerwald" (Strauss), sung by Miss Jepson; duet; "La ci darem la mano" from "Don Giovanni" (Mozart).

In this joint recital, Ezio Pinza, the dark and doughty basso of the Metropolitan Opera, made his initial appearance in Washington, sharing the program with his blonde colleague, Helen Jepson, who has been a comparatively frequent visitor here in recent seasons. The contrast in personalities was paralleled by the opposition between the vocal timbres, their alternate groups of songs sounding almost like antiphonal responses between robust sonority and silvery vibrance.

The richness of Mr. Pinza's voice reminds one of Shalyapin, and the reminiscence does not stop at that point, for the dramatic intenseness of the Italian basso is similar to that of his Russian predecessor. Both have the power of projecting a song by concentration upon its mood, making the modulations of tone subservient to emotional shades. This is more than a technical trick, more than an increase or diminution of volume; it emanates from a forceful temperament.

To call Mr. Pinza's vocal equipment superb is to apply the adjective in its literal and symbolic meanings. He is actually a superb singer ,and his voice is metaphorically proud. It is a voice that can rightfully assume the arrogance of strength without seeming vainglorious. Moreover, it has a daemonic quality in the Socratic sense, a quality that fixes and fascinates the attention.

The sheer vitality of his singing carries conviction. To each song he gives its particular profile and emotional individuality. In its wide range, its plasticity of phrasing, and its gamut of expression, his voice meets every requirement for a basso both lyric and dramatic.

Miss Jepson grows in artistic stature with each successive visit. There is abundant evidence of sedulous practice in the greater ease of her tone production and in her increasing command of subtlety in tonal nuance. In the Franck "Nocturne" she showed at its best her ability to control a fine flowing line. She still has a tendency to spread her tone in moments of dramatic fervor, and the beauty of her clear head tones is sometimes marred by forcing.

Old-Age Pensioners Get Maine Liquor Tax

Portland, Me., Jan. 18 (AP).—Maine liquor purchases began contributing to old-age pension costs today with enforcement of a 10 per cent liquor sales tax.

The tax law, an emergency measure, went through the Legislature last week. The tax will be effective until June 30 and will provide an estimated $250,000 to continue pensions for 4,000 persons. Funds for the pensions were taken, during 1936, from the State contingent fund, now "exhausted."

G. G. Fletcher Rites Planned At Home Today

Members of Company Will Be Pallbearers for Fire Lieutenant.

Funeral services for Fire Lieut. Gilbert Gibson Fletcher, 60, of No. 20 Engine Co., who died at George Washington Hospital Saturday after two weeks' illness, will be held today at his home, 4209 Ellicott street, followed by burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery. Members of his company will serve as pallbearers.

A native of Loudoun County, Va., Lieut. Fletcher was appointed to the District Fire Department October 3, 1907, when horses still pulled the apparatus. He was made a sergeant March 21, 1923, and a lieutenant May 4, 1927.

Twice Lieut. Fletcher was decorated for heroism in rescue work. The Commissioners ordered him awarded with a ribbon for his work in the Knickerbocker Theater disaster in January, 1922, and he also received a ribbon for rescue work the next year.

Surviving Lieut. Fletcher are his widow, Mrs. Della W. Fletcher; two sons, Charles and James Louis Fletcher; a daughter, Della Elizabeth Fletcher; six brothers, Benjamin L. and James T. Fletcher, of Ballston, Va.; Joshua C. and Norris Fletcher, of Bluemont, Va.; Nicholas Fletcher, of Washington, and Allen T. Fletcher, of Severn, Md., and five sisters, Mrs. C. W. Littleton, Bluemont; Mrs. R. E. Anderson, of Washington; Mrs. Bertha Longerbeam, of Purcellville, Va.; Mrs. Margaret Jones, of Edenton, N. C.; and Mrs. H. A. Hall, of Round Hill, Va.,

Great Army Amphibian Off on Distance Flight

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Lieut. H. M. McCaffrey, of Langley Field, Va., will lift the Army's latest long-distance air weapon, a twin-motored, 2,000-horsepower amphibian, off the runaway at Floyd Bennett Field tomorrow in a speed flight to Miami, Fla., and return, Army officials announced today.

With three flight observers, Lieut. McCaffrey, a Notre Dame football player in 1928 and 1929, will take off at 6:30 a. m. He expects to refuel at Miami and return the same day.

Stomach Ulcers Formula Attracts Much Attention

Scientific Facts of Hyperacidic Conditions Made Known

There are four important functions which should be obtained to help a condition of this kind, (1) excessive acid must be reduced, (2) protective coating over stomach walls prevents irritation and promotes healing, (3) elimination aided, (4) proper foods taken. This is exactly what the Toma Tablet course endeavors to do. If you suffer from stomach ulcers, gastritis, gas pains, heartburn, indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation and associated conditions induced by hyperacidity, investigate the Toma Tablet course, as it is proving a palliative and symptomatic aid for these conditions.

No Medicine Gives Quick Relief

Authorities will tell you that quick relief is usually impossible for a gastric-hyperacidic condition. It has taken time for your condition to reach its present stage, and it is going to take time to relieve it. Dosing yourself with only a quick-acting alkalizer may aid, but does not help to allay the irritated surfaces. Toma not only neutralizes acidity (so-called alkalizing) but soothes and relieves. For this reason Toma Tablets are recommended as a course; to take consistently according to directions over a reasonable period, as well as adhering to the food suggestions included with each botttle.

Toma Praised. Thousands of sufferers after unsatisfactory experiences are amazed at the benefits derived from the distinctively different formula, Toma Tablets. After battling an acid stomach condition for years, Mr. O. R. Brown, of Toledo, writes: "The X-Ray showed ulcers of the stomach, then a friend told me of Toma Tablets. I gained weight, slept like a log, and soon ate like a young wolf. My friends marvel at what Toma has done for me." Toma Tablets, now available at drug stores, have been shipped to nine foreign countries throughout the world, and are prepared by experienced pharmaceutical chemists to assure scintific accuracy.

Make This Simple Test Yourself

Take any stomach tablet, even those sold at much higher prices, chew it, drink a glass of water, then look in the mirror at your mouth and tongue—Now! do the same with a Toma Tablet, and you will be quick to notice that one glass of water will not entirely wash down that thin gelatinous film in your mouth. This is why thousands are turning to Toma, as they do the same in your stomach by giving a greater protecting shield over your stomach walls against acids and other painful action on tender, inflamed stomach surfaces.

Toma Tablets Not a Candy. When you start to take Toma Tablets, don't expect them to be candy, as they are a medicine containing a combination of carefully chosen ingredients found in no other known formula. There is nothing in them other than medical agents to promote more lasting relief. Don't delay! Start taking them today. Go to your druggist and insist on the genuine Toma Tablets; stubbornly refuse anything else—the Triple T on the label and on each individual tablet—is your guarantee of the genuine Toma Tablets. If your druggist does not have a supply on hand he can quickly get them from his wholesaler. Save money, buy the big economical regular size bottle at $3 or try the small introductory size at $1.00.

Invalidation Sought By Indicted Quartet

Alleging that three persons on the grand jury that indicted them were connected with the Federal Government, Joseph Silverman, jr., his brother, Nathan, Thomas Jefferson Ryan and former Brig. Gen. Alexander E. Williams, yesterday in District Court filed a plea asking that the indictment be invalidated because it presented the Government as both prosecutor and complainant.

The plea was made in a petition filed by attorneys William E. Leahy, Roy St. Lewis, and William J. Hughes, jr. It will be argued next week.

The charge against the four men is that they conspired to defraud the Government by preventing the House Military Affairs Committee from questioning Frank E. Speicher, who was being sought as a witness. The quartet pleaded not guilty when arraigned several months ago.

Plane Maneuvers To Be in Michigan

The War Department ordered the Army's General Heorquarters Airforce yesterday to hold its mid-winter maneuvers at Oscoda, Mich., Army's General Headquarters Air-New England. Lack of Army flying fields in Maine and Vermont caused the change.

The number of ships which will participate and the exact date for the tests have not been decided upon Housing For Congressmen.

Representative Beiter's bill providing for a Congressional housing development to be financed by the RFC at a cost of $6,000,000 has been called "utopian."

If the adjective implies that the project will probably never materialize, it seems well chosen. If it is intended to convey a suggestion of an ideal haven for Congressional tenants, the word is utterly unsuitable. What could be more exasperating to the average Congressman after a long, hot day filled with vehement debate and acrimonious argument than to meet fellow orators in communal halls or hear their voices floating out of windows and reverberating in air shafts?

The most de luxe Congressional house, hotel and apartment would soon look like a prison to the inmates. It would become as unpopular as the tenements, model or old style, erected by paternal employers for mill workers. It would take on the cheerless quality of those beautiful dormitories which some of our colleges and universities provide for homeless instructors. One trembles to think of the effect of such wholesale housing accommodation upon the legislative mind and, more important, upon the legislative output. But why worry? If these model dwellings should ever be constructed, it is safe to guess that they would share the fate of so many Federal housing developments and be occupied by people for whom they were never intended.

Shifting Price Levels.

Long before the recent depression, the disparity between the prices of raw materials and manufactured goods was a cause of serious economic dislocations. However, during the years between 1922 and 1929 the position of farmers and other producers of raw materials steadily improved until, by the latter year, pre-war parity with nonagricultural prices was virtually reached for farm products in this country. The subsequent catastrophic declines in raw material prices brought an average drop of 43 per cent in the purchasing power of farm products. And it is estimated that during three years of depression the aggregate gross income of all primary producers declined 57 per cent.

In the light of these facts, it is easy to understand why the rapid and in some cases spectacular advances in prices of farm products and industrial raw materials during the past year are viewed with profound satisfaction by many business analysts. The rise has brought the average level of wholesale prices of farm products above that of the general index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, while the index of prices received by farmers was 20 per cent above the pre-war average by the middle of November. Furthermore, a long list of commodities—metals, textile fibers, rubber, sugar, cocoa, hides, etc.—are currently selling at prices far above the figures of a year ago.

Such advances have been world-wide in character and have greatly increased the buying capacity of many countries heavily dependent upon sales of primary commodities. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics also states that the combined index of wholesale prices in the currencies of seven foreign countries which are important markets for American farm products advanced in October to 79 per cent of the 1926 average compared with only 73 per cent a year before. And in the past few weeks the rate of rise has probably accelerated.

As the disproportionately rapid shrinkage of purchasing power of producers of raw materials has been one of the major obstacles to trade revival, the price readjustments of the past year will, it is hoped, lead to increased buying of manufactured goods and afford a basis for sustained business recovery not only in this country but in many parts of the world. Not all students of price trends, however, take an optimistic view of the prospects for the immediate future.

There are certain elements in the current price situation that could easily destroy the hardly-won balance attained in recent months. Fears are expressed, for instance, that a rising price level might degenerate into an inflationary movement, with excessive increases in living costs, leading in turn to demands for higher wages, then further price advances. Moreover, the rise in prices of raw materials, if too pronounced, might easily check industrial activity. Indeed, complaints to that effect are already being heard.

In short, there is a vast difference between price increases which bring better adjustments between the incomes of producing groups and thus tend to stimulate balanced productive activity and price increases which force up production costs unduly and discourage production. The better balance introduced into the price structure is, as a matter of fact, extremely precarious since it has been brought about by artificial expedients, and, in the case of farm products, by crop failures.

Furthermore, so far as the United States is concerned, the status quo is threatened by a variety of price-raising factors, such as labor unrest, and speculative buying stimulated by easy money. Whether the beneficent effects of an achieved price rise will prove stronger than the malign possibilities suggested by the pessimists is an open question.

Toward A Real Settlement.

It becomes increasingly apparent that a new attempt to remove the war debts cancer from the body of international economic recovery is in contemplation.

None of the debtor nations has as yet officially approached the United States with the view to reopening the question. All of them, with Finland again the only exception, defaulted on their December, 1936, installments. Yet there have been rumors aplenty that some of the European governments are now eager to do something to break the present impasse.

In this connection there may be more than a little significance in the fact that France has named Georges Bonnet as its Ambassador to the United States. M. Bonnet is not a professional diplomat, as is the able and popular M. Andre Laboulaye whom he is to replace. But he is peculiarly qualified to deal with economic questions. He has seen service both as minister of finance and as minister of commerce in various French cabinets. He was one of the French delegates to the London economic conference of 1933 and is a friend and admirer of Secretary Hull.

It is not at all unlikely, therefore, that the Blum government is preparing to cut the Gordian knot by asking the United States for a review of the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement. And whatever special reasons France may have at this time for wanting the troublesome problem solved, it is clear that such a solution is needed if the recently concluded tripartite financial agreement is to continue to produce favorable results.

While that agreement provided the basis for monetary collaboration between the three great democracies and others prepared to join the group, its possibility as a force working for world economic improvement is limited as long as the war debts problem remains in its present wholly unsatisfactory state. Mr. Hull is not alone in his opinion that nothing is more likely to spike the guns of war than an improvement in world economic conditions, one resting not on the false basis of rearmament but on the firm foundations of improved international trade and stable currencies.

Whether such action will eventually take the form of a general international economic conference, or will be limited to bilateral negotiations with individual countries, is not clear. But the idea of orderly economic co-operation is again in the air. Co-operative action to lower trade barriers will be emphasized at the forthcoming meeting of the League of Nations Council, which, blocked in its efforts to find political solutions to some of the grave problems facing Europe, is seeking the more fundamental end of economic improvement.

Although the impending visit to Washington of Walter Runciman, president of the British Board of Trade, is ostensibly unofficial, his presence, with that of Sir Otto Niemeyer, should make possible a constructive discussion of British and American views on war debts and other financial and economic questions of interest to Washington and London.

But no more progress can be made in the direction of any larger objective if the war debt question remains in its present form. Soon or late, and the sooner the better, a fresh start on this thorny subject must be made. And the American people have got to be prepared, when readjustment of the debts becomes the order of the day, for a considerable writing down of the existing settlements. The French and British, similarly, must guard against the disillusionment which would result from thinking that the easy procedure of nonpayment has of itself solved the war debts problem.

Expensive Propaganda.

As a conscientious member of the Joint Committee on Printing, Senator Vandenberg objects to the format of the Resettlement Administration's annual report. So elaborately embellished with maps and illustrations that some of it could not be handled by the Government Printing Office, the publication cost $1.07 per copy to print. In contrast, the Federal Trade Commission's report of the same number of pages was produced for 34 cents a copy.

Senator Vandenberg proposes a resolution requiring approval from the Senate Committee on Printing before color printing or illustrations are included in annual reports. Except that the cost comes out of relief funds, the Resettlement report in itself is no serious concern, he admits, but it is sure to stir other Federal offices to demands for equal luxury in their printing. The President apparently had much the same thought when he recently criticized Government agencies which have been exceeding their printing allowances by sending only part of their orders to the Public Printer and doing the rest themselves, charging the extra costs to other appropriations.

In the main Government departments need no warning on keeping their printing conservative. The very nature of their reports allows of little else. Indeed, one or two offices might be encouraged to abandon their present habit of mimeographing information sheets in a way which leaves them virtually illegible. Such parsimony errs almost as far in one direction as does the extravagance of the RA and the WPA in the other.

But the intentionally promotional tactics of the relief agencies is inexcusable. Trick typography and splashing colors have no place in public reports. When used so, they only convert what should be matter-of-fact statement into malappropriate propaganda.

Plight Of The Hospitals.

For some reason the Community Chest's last drive failed to achieve its goal. As a result, the nine local hospitals which are already owed $90,000 for services to patients certified by the Chest's Central Admittance Bureau, anticipate at least an equal deficit in 1937. In these circumstances, they are asking permission to organize a supplemental campaign for funds.

To grant this would mean a fundamental amendment of the by-laws of the Community Chest. "Give once a year for all the year" is the Chest slogan. To abandon it would affect one of the fundamentals of the Chest idea. Yet what alternatives remain?

The Chest could undertake to solicit only those residents who did not contribute during the last campaign; but this promises little. It might borrow the needed funds in anticipation of next year's collections. That would be a very dangerous precedent. It could urge the hospitals to resign from the Chest roster and raise their own funds. This, too, would strike at the heart of the Chest idea.

Yet something must be done. Unlike the pleas directed to some other institutions under the Chest, illness can not be ignored by the hospitals. Plainly, many Washingtonians did not fully appreciate the urgency of the hospitals' need. Having doubted the full urgency of the Chest solicitors' appeal, they have permitted the present problem to arise.

Readjustment of the city's hospital system might improve the situation in the future. For example, Children's Hospital is not now adequately paid for treating public patients for whom special equipment is lacking at Gallinger. Also, a change of policy to admit pay or part-pay patients to the latter institution—where per patient costs are the lowest—might relieve the private hospitals of the burden of those who refuse to enter the public hospital for fear of stigmatizing themselves as paupers.

Greatest of all relief, however, would come through a more adequate allowance by Congress for public health in the Capital. Even the single health center requested this year by the public health office would do much to ease the strain on the city's overworked hospitals.

Nicaragua Canal.

Recent earthquakes in Central America emphasize for Representative Vinson, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, the need for another canal between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Tremors dump landslides into the deep cuts of the Panama Canal and enemy bombs could do the same or worse, he argues, but a passage through low country would not be as open to such dangers. Therefore, he will once again urge the House toward construction of a Nicaragua canal. Senator Walsh plans to introduce a companion bill in the upper chamber. Both legislators see in it a bulwark to national defense and an aid to commerce.

Army engineers plotted a route for such a canal in 1931 and estimated the cost at $722,000,000. Ten years would be needed for construction, they calculated, but once built it would reduce the port-to-port distance of about two-thirds of the ships now using the Panama Canal. A perpetual treaty exists between Nicaragua and the United States, but the consent of Costa Rica would also be needed. Diplomats might furthermore be asked to do some international soothing if the canal were authorized. Two years ago Japanese susceptibilities were somewhat aroused when Mr. Vinson then urged action on the proposed canal.

In all probability the Nicaragua Canal will some day be built. But a second cut through Central America seems as little justified today, from either the military or commercial point of view, as it did two years ago or earlier. Though Nicaragua is several hundred miles nearer our home bases than Panama, the difference would make a new canal appreciably less vulnerable to attack. And the advantage of having two canals which the Navy might use simultaneously is less apparent when it is considered that Panama City is 750 miles farther south in the Pacific than the proposed western entrance at Brito.

Considered commercially, the new canal would only further reduce Panama Canal traffic, which has fallen off sorely during the depression. Moreover, any savings in intercoastal transportation time would scarcely offset even the maintenance costs of the new canal, estimated at $10,000,000 annually.

Modern Architecture.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is in reply to Florence S. Auguste's letter of January 9.

Modern architecture does not consist of a large block with a smaller one placed on top; the principle of today's building being simplicity; the motif being beauty of design and the construction being common sense. Of course, with the discarding of doo-dads, columns, rosettes, unnecessary railings and crevices, many starlings that now decorate the buildings around Washington will be homeless.

Of course, modern day building won't last. No, we will return to the old horse and buggy days, of Empire, Grecian and a dash of anything with a flare of ornamentation. Rockefeller Center, Radio City, Hill-McGrey Building, Philadelphia Savings Funding Society Building of Philadelphia are only temporary and may come down for parking lots. Please study the modern buildings and as a comparison look at our lovely old State Department, the City Hall in New York, Market Street Postoffice of Philadelphia, and last but not least our dingy soiled Postoffice on Pennsylvania avenue. Where Is Odin?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Washington, which is singularly avoided by the Metropolitan Opera, except, possibly, for scattered concert fag ends, is being treated in your forum to a clash of two great Wagnerian controversialists. And to think that this should be an offshoot of a discussion of a sordid hill-country parricide!

Is it too much to hope that before lilac time we will have been carried through the entire Ring, and in fancy hear the Valkyries thunder through the Blue Ridge? E'en now I can preceive these ladies in the wings and I can identify them, but for heaven's sake, who and where is Odin? CHARLES E. CROSS.

On Foreign Propaganda.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A news dispatch in the Buffalo Evening News quotes Count Francesco Mario Guardabassi as stating that "Premier Benito Mussolini is annoyed at what he regards as the United States' failure to 'appreciate' fascism."

Count Guardabassi feels that a propaganda campaign in the United States would help to correct the "misapprehensions" about fascism and offered his own services in such an effort. Campaigns are expensive. In the hope that Count Cuardabassi may be spared unnecessary effort and expenditure of funds that might be used to pay debts outstanding and due, the following is submitted.

Re: Propaganda. The right of any nation on earth to have any form of government the people of that nation are willing to submit to is admitted. No nation, however, has any right to try to influence (by propaganda or otherwise) the people of another country to change the form of government they are satisfied to live under. Minding one's own business is a good policy for nations as well as individuals and a safe policy to follow.

Re: The implied inability of Americans to "appreciate." American citizens appreciate the fact that they are living under a government of the people, for the people and by the people; that under the American Constitution our citizens have certain rights and privileges as individuals not enjoyed by people of other nations. They appreciate also the wisdom of the framers of our Constitution in providing safeguards for the rights and privileges of our citizens.

We appreciate the fact that the desire to acquire power and to control the actions of others in inherent in human nature, but we remember the admonition of Thomas Jefferson, who said: "In questions of power, let no more be said of confidence in man but bind him down with the chains of the Constitution."

Advocates, foreign or domestic, of any isms other than Americanism, should realize the fact that no man living will ever dictate to or control the destinies of freeborn American citizens, and that there are several million trained men in this country who will back that statement with whatever is necessary to make it effective.

Discretion In Alien Cases Assailed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of January 15, in an editorial entitled, "Deportation Policy," seems to me to argue for the "ascendancy of personal will over law" that you denounced in your editorial of January 7 on the "President's Message," objecting forcefully and convincingly to his suggestion that not only Congress and the Supreme Court, but the Constitution be all made to "harmonize" with his notion of what "the general welfare" of "we, the people of the United States," is.

In your editorial of the 7th instant you call attention to the President's thesis that "the process of our democracy must not be imperiled by the denial of essential powers of free government," and make quite clear, it seems to me, that you believe in a government of definite written laws enacted under the powers delegated and curbs contained in the Constitution of the United States of America. If that should be as to New Deal policies, why not also as to immigration and deportation policies? If there are meritorious hardship cases, why should the law in those cases be nullified by "the personal will" of two law enforcement officers as provided in the Kerr-Coolidge bill?

Heretofore Congress has extended mercy in meritorious and even questionable meritorious hardship cases, such as that covered by a bill that became law when the President signed it on the 7th of last March, granting relief to an alien woman who had not only committed deliberate perjury before consuls of the State Department in her effort to avoid waiting her quota turn with law observing aliens, but who then entered the country illegally, thus committing another felony. On the 27th and 28th of last May hearings were held on 57 similar relief bills, one of which would prevent the deportation of an alien who 10 years ago separated himself from his wife and three children in Europe and entered our country fraudulently on bought fraudulent papers, and who has not seen his wife or three children since.

During the past three years the deportation of 3,300 aliens has been stayed. Members of the House and Senate (Congressional Record, Senate, April 3 and 4; House, April 9, 1936), have shown after an inspection of the files of the cases in the Department of Labor that some of these aliens are forgers, perjurers, Army deserters, Government property stealers, dope peddlers, prostitutes and even killers.

Such facts show how easy it is to impose on or through influence secure favors with persons invested with autocratic authority such as that contained in the Kerr-Coolidge bill. Even though those facts have been brought to the attention of the Senate and House the assistant commissioner at Cleveland, Ohio, last September, where he and two other department officials went to try to induce the legion to indorse the Kerr-Coolidge bill, admitted, according to Congressman Starnes, of Alabama, that not a single one of the over 3,300 aliens whose deportations have been stayed during the past three years has been deported.

The truth about the Kerr-Coolidge bill is that it was not "lost" in the legislative jam in the closing days of the last Congress. The bill has been repeatedly abandoned and revised, but has always contained the autocratic authority to dispose of most immigration and deportation cases as certain administrative officials "find in the public interest." I respectfully submit that such finding is a usurpation in part of legislative authority conferred exclusively on the Congress and that under the Constitution the relief of hardship cases should be in part by legislative enactment and by Congress instead of exclusively by some law enforcement officer.

If the alien referred to in your editorial who admits having forged three checks about 20 years ago, is not to be deported because he is married, as I understand, to an alien in this country, and has since entry here behaved himself, then the law should be so amended. It would be a simple matter to so amend the law and to make the amendment broad enough to cover the other meritorious hardship cases. Either that, or there should be private relief bills covering these individual cases. If, for instance, an alien is not to be deported because deportation would disrupt his family, then amend the law so providing, but I respectfully submit that it is contrary to what you call "the essence of free representative government;" and our Constitution to confer upon an administrative officer the authority to do what he "finds in the public interest." Justice Van Devanter's Violation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Justice Van Devanter seems to be overlooking a fine opportunity. The newspaper reports indicate that the justice went hunting; that he carried a license; that he had not complied with the law requiring a $1 Federal stamp on the license; that he was discovered by a game warden.

As a member of the highest authority in the land, the justice knows that he violated a law, and that ignorance of that law was and is no excuse. In the interest of continuing respect for law, and as a means of eliminating a feeling among many that position and power mean favoritism under the law, it would have been well for Justice Van Devanter to repair to the office of a lesser justice, admit his guilt, pay his fine and go home rejoicing in the fact that he had done the proper, as well as the right, thing. Even then, he would have been the recipient of favors, for any lesser citizen would not have been permitted to remain in his duck-blind, but would have been hustled into court as any ordinary criminal.

Since the justice failed to recognize his opportunity, what respect will many hereafter give to his judicial pronouncements? The answer to that question is of more concern to me than the prosecution apparently being demanded by so many others. R. E. W.

Civil Service Reform.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The new set-up of the civil service machinery represents a most satisfactory feature of the President's reorganization scheme. It is calculated to eliminate discrimination and injustice of which the female sex and the colored race complain under existing operation of this arm of the Government.

Governor Landon, in his recent candidacy, advised his colored supporters that if elected he would see to it that the civil service abuses prejudicial to the welfare of the race would be corrected. Notwithstanding this solemn promise, President Roosevelt proved to be the more persuasive candidate to the colored voter. President Roosevelt declared in his address at Howard University that there were to be no forgotten races. Surely the righteousness o' the New Deal will exceed the slightness of reaction. The Post Impressionist

Sentimental Journey.

I HAVE sometimes thought that I would like to travel in leisurely fashion the entire coast and borders of the United States, to see what I could see, and write about it. (If you can't write about it what's the good of seeing anything?)

I have decided that an automobile would be no good for my purpose. It would mean cutting out ever so many sideroads unsuitable for all cars save those owned by people who live on these rough little byways, and the sideroads would be an important part of my itinerary.

I would start down South on the road nearest to the water and turn to the left at the first opportunity in order to get as close to the water as possible.

(No, I don't want to go in a boat. I'm saving that for another trip with motorboat, skiff and canoe, all three. What I want right now is to see all the little out-of-the-way places, no matter how insignificant.)

* * * *

Suppose I started from Baltimore and moved down the coast. After months of travel I arrive at Solomons Island. Millstone Landing on the opposite shore of the Patuxent is just three miles away. How long will it take me to reach it? Weeks and weeks and weeks. The main traveled road touches the water only here and there, but by taking roads to the left I reach the water at scores of places, and walk right in and turn around and walk right back again. And having gone up the Patuxent as far as Upper Marlboro, I'd cross the bridge there and come down the Patuxent in exactly the same way and after a great lapse of time would reach Cedar Point and the bay.

Monotonous? Not a bit of it. I'll bet there'd be a good story almost every day. The world is full of interesting things and interesting people and they are found everywhere and the number of interesting things that happen is plumb startling.

Now it is manifest that for a trip of this kind you need something more than time and transportation. You need an excuse. You can't go into a small community and moon around without exciting suspicion. People will have reason to believe that there is something wrong either with your morals or with your intellect. They may be dead right about your intellect, but there is no reason why you should allow them to get wise to the fact. So an excuse is very important.

Transportation is easy. Either a donkey or shank's mare will do. But an excuse, an excuse!

And then, just the other day, right here in Washington, in a little park on Euclid street, I found the answer.

Surrounded by a group of happy school children a little boy, between 2 and 3 years old, sat on a pony while a photographer tried to make him smile before he took a snapshot. That photographer was a clown as well as an artist. His antics made the school children roar with laughter, but the little fellow on the pony was not amused. He looked at the photographer gravely as though he wondered what the silly fellow meant by it all.

No, I don't know how it turned out. I had other business to attend to. But as I went about it, I realized that an old-time problem had been solved for me. All I needed was a pony, a buggy, a portable typewriter, some paper, a pipe and tobacco, a suitcase for a change of linen and a couple of cameras. The cameras tell the story. One of them would be a tintype outfit. That would be my excuse. The other would be an up-to-date camera for the taking of pictures to be reproduced in print.

That's it: a snapshotter; what used to be called a kidnaper in the dear old days before "kidnaper" had become a word of horror. And on the side I would be a newspaper photographer.

* * * *

The profession of newspaper photographer is a notable and exciting one. I have known many newspaper photographers. The one whose image sticks most firmly in my memory is a little man who worked on the Philadelphia Public Ledger. And I have forgotten his name! He and Tiny Maxwell, sporting editor, did a lot of traveling together and were great pals. (Perhaps they still are. They are both dead. Two good scouts!)

When Tiny held out an arm straight from the shoulder, the photographer could walk right under it with his hat on, but every little bit of that little man was pure nerve. Difficult airplane pictures were commonplaces to him. He could stand on a trestle a dozen stories above the street and calmly "shoot" the men at work. He it was who photographed King Albert of Belgium at Independence Hall and said, "Stand a little to the left, King, and grin." And the King did as he was told—a case of one good man giving the right response to another. It's a darned shame to forget the name of a man like that! Maybe I'll think of it later.

Of course, I wouldn't be an honest-to-goodness newspaper photographer. I wouldn't be on assignment and I wouldn't be taking any risks of physical injury to myself or my camera. Mine would be a humdrum existence. Maybe I'd do artistic work like the fellows in the photogravure section.

I'd just wander into a village, find a stable for Jerry (that is the pony's name) and bed and board for myself. And there you are!

What do I know about photography? Tish, tush, boy, why bring that up?

Four Years Make a Difference.

A QUICK LOOK around the shrine of the patriotics' devotion plainly reveals a difference between this year's coronation orgy and the one four years ago come March the Fourth when Mr. Roosevelt stepped out on the rough pine lemonade stand behind the Capitol to denounce Fear. Of course, the hotels are crowded and the innkeepers, these fat cats who always thrive come boom, come panic, gently insist that the customers engage quarters for the duration of the emergency, which is three days. There are bleachers on Pennsylvania avenue which convey a festive suggestion, as of a public hanging in Kentucky, and little boys, or urchins, are selling copies of the official program on the streets. But four years back Repeal was new, the country was scared and nervous and the hungering Democrats were milling around everywhere looking for the pay-window. Mr. Farley still was known principally as a prize-fight commissioner and the citizens were inspecting him as a scientist ogles some strange guy through a microscope. Now all that is past. Statesmen and common spectators hoist their drams with more nonchalance and none of that feeling that the Supreme Court will say it isn't legal. Bishop Cannon has disappeared to God knows where and Mrs. Ella Boole couldn't break into a Congressman's office with a fire ax.

It is strange to realize, looking back, that there is no such thing as a wet or a dry now. Two or three days before Mr. Roosevelt's first ceremonies, the police and Secret Service had established a frontier on the highway just out of town to turn back a band of hunger-marchers who first sat down on the wet pavement at the cry of "disperse, ye rebels," but got their pants wet and presently went away assured that if they would just be nice a while, everything would be all right. Then the banks closed and a man with a little folding money in his pocket became an old, old pal of the most casual acquaintances.

BY NOW the deserving Democrats have burrowed deep into the fur of the old critter and are resting warm and contented. They are there for four more years and possibly for four years after that because the sentiment is growing that it is bad baseball to pull a pitcher out of there when he is going along nice and easy and turning them back in order. Mr. Farley is no longer a vulgar prizefight commissioner but the creator of the sinister specter of Farleyism and a big man in the land. A number of the more playful and useless local statesmen have been farmed out to private business after more or less brief careers in the public service and, in general, the new is off the Administration.

IT HAS been decided to eliminate from this year's line of march the remarkable bands of straggling slewfoots who stumbled along for hour after hour in 1933 in the most astonishing display of martial ineptitude since the sergeant tied hay and straw to the feet of the recruits of '61 to show them which was which. This is not a bad idea at all for, although this is not supposed to be a warlike Nation, it is just as well not to give the foreign military attaches too bad an idea. Consequently, the marching this time will be done only by members of the military establishment who know how to pick them up and set them down. This will be a privation to the vanity of thousands of the Sons and Daughters of I Will Arise who in 1933 paraded like so many bellhops going down to the drug store for a ham on rye for the gentleman in 262 but, after all, people who can't march shouldn't parade. A repetition of the last shuffle might give Japan ideas.

The picnic aspect of the swearing-in and the ensuing speech from the throne on the pine platform behind the Capitol will be strictly in keeping with Democrat traditions, however, and may be indorsed without reserve. It always reaffirms the mortal simplicity of the people's will and the people's choice and the only possible improvement would be a hot griddle on the counter and a line at the end of the President's speech. "They're all hot, boys; get 'em while they're hot."

Weaknesses of Fiscal Formula Shown

Taxes Based on Rates in Other Cities Found Unfair.

The Post presents the ninth in a series of articles on the problems of the District of Columbia.

By Merlo J. Pusey.

SEARCH FOR a fiscal formula occupies much the same position in Washington's history as does the quest for the mythical Northwest

MERLO J. PUSEY.

Passage in the early annals of America. To date, those undertakings have been about equally unsuccessful. In the case of the missing formula perhaps the wise course now would be to forget devious routes as well as costly explorations and cut through the remaining obstacles, as the Government did at Panama.

After months of study the Jacobs committee has given us a fiscal formula which few people understand and many others distrust. Parts of the formula are scarcely subject to challenge. But other parts have served only to arouse more vigorous and at the same time more confused controversy. As a result there is not much probability that it will come any nearer to application than many previous proposals have done.

The committee's formula is divided into three sections. First, it advises "extension of the present system of contractual reimbursement to cover the entire field of inter-governmental operating services." Inquiry shows that the Federal Government is performing 39 services for the District and the District is rendering 30 specific services for the Government. In only a few cases are these services now paid for by the agency benefiting.

It is unquestionably desirable to separate expenses, as well as administrative functions, along local and national lines. Certainly the District should pay for all service it receives from Federal agencies, unless some national interest is involved. And the reverse is equally true. In some instances the committee has wisely recommended the transfer of functions along with a more equitable division of expenses. In my opinion, its counsel along this line could well have extended a good deal farther than it does.

Items Charged District Raise Many Questions.

AS TO some items charged to the District under this arrangement, however, questions have already arisen. For example, the District would be charged $40,000 because the Comptroller General is required to duplicate part of the work of the District auditor. Following the practice of other cities, Washington could have its accounts independently audited for one-fourth that sum.

The most unwarranted item included in this list is $14,000 to reimburse the Budget Bureau for ripping the Commissioners' budget to pieces. This, of course, it a grave disservice to the local community, as the committee itself recognizes in another section of its report. To require local taxpayers to reimburse the Federal Treasury for this handicap imposed upon the local government would be little short of outrageous.

So long as the present haphazard system remains, the District may be more reasonably asked to reimburse the United States District Attorney for the prosecution of local cases. The desirable adjustment, however, is to transfer such cases to the corporation counsel's office, where they belong. That natural division of responsibility would also tend to relieve the District of the unreasonable expense of maintaining prisoners convicted of Federal offenses.

One questionable conclusion may also be found in the list of services for which the Government is asked to reimburse the District. It is obvious that the Federal Treasury should pay for license tags, permits, etc., issued to diplomats, for the temporary home provided transient former soldiers and sailors seeking increased benefits from Congress, for the handling of Federal cases in the courts here and for the use of District property and unexpended District funds in the Treasury. But why should Federal liability for police service be limited to "police details for specific Federal purposes?"

That question leads to one of the foremost inconsistencies of the Jacobs fiscal formula. On the last page of its report the committee listed the "estimated costs of benefits to the Federal Government from normal governmental functions of the District." These "benefits" include fire protection, fire-alarm box service, maintenance of streets and sidewalks, street cleaning and lighting, garbage and sewage disposal, police protection, etc. In 1936 the committee estimated that the Federal Government obtained benefits from these services worth $621,248. Yet no provision whatever is made to reimburse the District.

The item in this list for the policing of Federal property seems to be entirely separate from the allowance for detail police service for which reimbursement is recommended. While setting up a system for the equitable division of expenses, the committee has excluded from consideration a large number of the most important services rendered by the District. Presumably local taxpayers are expected to make the Nation a present of $621,248 spent to guard and service its property.

Municipal Services Charged to Non-residents.

THE COMMITTEE also took note of the fact that the District is required or expected to provide schooling, hospital and library service to a large number of non-residents. Instead of asking the Government to stand this expense, however, it suggests that these costs be shifted directly to the beneficiaries. Congress has never liked that policy. While it is undoubtedly fair to all concerned, there is a prevalent feeling that the Capital City should be more generous to non-residents than the average municipality. If Congress still holds that viewpoint, it will be under a clear obligation to meet this extra expense.

In the case of the schools, moreover, it is obvious that the collection of tuition from non-residents would not fully compensate the District for the unusual demands upon its educational system. The children of Congressmen, who are part-time residents but contribute very little to District revenues, obtain free schooling here. The same is true of many temporary Government officials' children. Patently this burden cannot be off-set by collecting tuitions from the pupils coming in from Maryland and Virginia.

On a very limited scale the committee recognized that the District incurs extraordinary expenditures because it is the National Capital. In this category relatively high salaries, liberal leave for employes and an elaborate park system constitute the largest items. But Congress is asked to pay only 30 per cent of park maintenance costs, in spite of the committee's own finding that expenditures on parks here are "about 2½ times the average" in other cities. The general principle laid down for division of park costs is equally applicable to the Zoological Park, but the committee advised against reimbursement in this case. Even more illogical is its decision that the District should pay the full expenses of the National Park and Planning Commission.

While the first point of the formula is entirely sound in theory, therefore, the committee would apply it at many points to the disadvantage of the District. Of course, it is impossible to determine in all instances where local interests stop and national interests begin. No one would advise an attempt to contract for such service as fire protection. Nevertheless, I think, any fair-minded person would agree that the Government should help pay the cost of keeping the city safe from fire. If the rudiments of this formula are retained, therefore, another point should be added to recompense the District for those services to which the contractual relationship cannot be applied.

Section 2 of the formula provides for division of capital outlays for improvements in which both the Federal Government and the District are interested. Here, again, we have a proposal deserving commendation in theory. By all means Congress should pay the extra expense when it compels the local community to plan its projects on an elaborate scale befitting the dignity of a great Capital.

The Municipal Center is a case in point. Local officials set out to tively modest structure to house the buy two squares and erect a rela- local government. Congress forced them to buy four squares at more than double the anticipated cost. Then it proposed elaborate buildings to match the Federal development on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue. As the project was thus planned, it would have cost $20,000,000—twice the amount which local officials think the District would be justified in spending.

Efforts are now being made to bring about revision of the plans and to sell the most expensive part of the site to the Government. But Congress has full control. If it forces the District to erect an elaborate municipal plant, with the object of beautifying the Capital City, there will be an inescapable obligation for Congress to pay the excess costs.

In this connection it should be noted, too, that the committee's proposal includes only "capital outlays of joint interest." Elaborate improvements also entail large maintenance and operating expenses. Since the equity of dividing capital expenditures of this sort has been clearly recognized, there seems to be no logical reason why adjustments on operating expenses should be limited to parks and personnel standards.

The chief weakness of this second point in the formula would doubtless be its tendency to break down in operation. For it would require an allocation of expenses to national and local taxpayers on every improvement undertaken in Washington. That job would be assigned to a National Capital Planning Commission representing both governmental units and local citizens. Even with the best of motives and intentions, that body would find it difficult to determine the relative Federal and local interest in every park, playground, school, courthouse, police station, street or administration building proposed by the Commissioners. Every project would contain the seeds of a protracted scrap.

The third point in the Jacobs committee formula involves:

Comparison of the average cost per capita of supplying normal State and local services in a group of comparable communities with the cost per capita of supplying similar services in the District, and payment of any excess from the Federal Treasury as long as Congress exercises direct and positive control over the District government.

By this means the committee proposes to "apply in practice the doctrine that the taxpayers of the District may be expected to bear costs equal to normal costs for like services in comparable communities."

The method of comparing per capita costs is chosen because data are not regularly available for comparison of effective tax rates. The committee outlines an elaborate procedure by which the matching process shall be carried out. But at every point it runs against the inescapable fact that there is no parallel between Washington's budget and that of other cities.

Mr. Jacobs and his investigators attempted to eliminate from the comparison some expenses that are not incurred here. But they do not exclude "interest upon funds borrowed to finance general departments" for which no counterpart can be found in the District. And, of course, they make no allowance for the large overhead expenses of maintaining city, county and State agencies to perform what is accomplished here by a single government.

Washington is unique in its organization, as well as its disfranchisement. It can not be accurately placed on the same footing with other communities that are governed along totally different lines. The attempt to turn these contracts into comparison led the committee into such devious and complicated paths that the very intricacy of this proposed yardstick becomes a powerful argument against it.

Still more serious from the practical viewpoint is the effect this formula would have upon Congress. That body would be under constant warning that if it permitted expenditures to run above the average for other cities it would have to pay the difference. Since the comparison could not be made until after each appropriation bill has been passed and the money spent, there would be a strong tendency each year to reduce the local budget to a minimum.

Any realistic approach to the fiscal relations issue, therefore, will necessitate complete abandonment of Point III in the Jacobs formula.

Two Federal Duties Generally Recognized.

FROM THE early history of the District two obligations of the Federal Government have been recognized: First, to pay the special expenses of developing and maintaining a Capital that will lend prestige to the entire Nation; second, to make some allowance to the District for the large-scale exemption of property here from taxes. To a limited extent the Jacobs committee would bring the first obligation into play. But the persistent rejection of the second responsibility seems to be the crux of the fiscal dilemma.

As early as 1835 the Southard committee urged Congress to share certain local expenses in proportion to the property it owned. The Starkweather report in 1872 held that Federal allotments should be related to the value of United States property in the District. Both the Hunton and Babcock reports, 1876 and 1896, respectively, justified the fixed percentage system by reference to relative values of taxable and tax-exempt property here.

In 1920 and 1930 the Bureau of Efficiency very positively held the Government to be obligated as a taxpayer to the District. That liability was calculated at $8,865,722 as of 1928 by applying the tax rate to Federal property, exclusive of parks and land used for the benefit of the District. Moreover, the bureau concluded that Congress should pay the District $733,581 to counteract the loss of revenue from property devoted to embassies, national churches, educational, scientific and benevolent institutions, hospitals, cemeteries, etc.; $466,500 to pay for "excess park maintenance," and $77,588 for "excess park development." The total payment under this formula would have amounted to $10,183,391.

Of course, the Bureau of Efficiency did not argue that the District should actually levy taxes upon the Federal Government. That would be quite unreasonable. It merely used the value of Federal property here to measure the approximate ooligation of the Government. Washington is a one-industry city, that industry being government. Factories and manufacturing establishments are discouraged from locating in the District. It appears to me, then, that the Government has just as much obligation to Washington as General Motors has to Detroit.

The ultimate necessity of making a fiscal adjustment that will bear some equitable relation to the ownership of property here is emphasized by the rate at which the Federal establishment is growing. It is estimated that within 13 years the value of tax-exempt property will equal that of taxable holdings. Already tax-exempt property amounts to 41 per cent of the total compared with 33 per cent in 1930.

Instead of using incomparable statistics from other cities to adjust fiscal relations between the national and local governments, therefore, it would be far simpler and more equitable to use comparative property values within the District as the first basic element in composite fiscal yardstick. Indeed, I think if that factor were substituted for Point 3 of the Jacobs formula, we should have the basis upon which a reasonable adjustment could be worked out to the satisfaction of both national and local interests.

Off the Record.

4-Power Pact

By Barnet Nover

Trying To Revive A Corpse.

IN THE SPRING of 1933 James Ramsay MacDonald returned to London from a flying trip to Rome, all a-dither and aglow. The Duce had confided to him a new and wondrous formula for peace. And the British prime minister was so excited about it that, when he arose in the House of Commons to explain what it was all about, his remarks were more muddled and woolly than ever.

But the members did finally get the impression that the ex-Lion of Lossiemouth was convinced Mussolini's formula would break the impasses at the disarmament conference then in session, stabilize peace in Europe and perform other miracles.

It would do so, apparently, through the device of a new Concert of Europe. No longer would Italy, Germany, France and Great Britain bother with the small fry cluttering up the map of Europe and the council chambers at Geneva. The four powers, once the plan went into effect, would constitute themselves a committee to enforce peace. The plan also suggested a revision of the peace treaties in the interests of the defeated powers.

• • • •

BY NO MEANS all the British were as enthusiastic about the plan as was MacDonald. But the government gave it its blessing and urged France to accept. This placed Premier Daladier on the horns of a dilemma.

For France to reject the plan outright, as it was tempted to do, would not only mean offending Great Britain, then, as now clutching at every straw to secure the appeasement of Europe; it would also mean offending Italy and possibly throwing that nation into Nazi Germany's arms.

Not to reject the plan, however, meant irritating and alienating Poland, Czechoslovakia and the other allies of France. These nations, like France itself, wanted nothing whatever to do with treaty revision. And the emphasis on great power politics inherent in Mussolini's proposal involved, as they saw it, their exclusion and their isolation.

But after much heart-searching and debate the French government agreed to accept the four-power plan "in principle."

It was clearly stalling for time. But its action satisfied neither side. It did not please Italy and it did not please France's allies. Indeed, French indecision on this as on other occasions caused a definite cooling in Franco-Polish relations. Polish leaders came to the conclusion that France might under certain circumstances leave the new republic to its fate; they also began to wonder whether the French alliance was as valuable to their nation as they had imagined.

Thus the way was paved for the German-Polish treaty of the following year and the formation of a new bloc in eastern Europe that was effectively to prevent the establishment of that interlocking system of regional peace pacts which, under Barthou, France came to favor.

THE FOUR-POWER plan never got out of the discussion stage. Before very long it was buried in an avalanche of events and supplanted by new peace proposals which also got nowhere. Apparently the Duce has not forgotten his plan, however. On the occasion of Gen. Goering's visit to Rome he has taken the opportunity to resurrect it and try and breathe new life in it.

So far as France is concerned the objections to the four-power scheme are even stronger now than they were in 1933. For one thing the links binding Germany and Italy are obviously greater now than they were then. In any such four-power combination, therefore, France would be isolated with regard to any problem regarding which the Fascist powers won over Great Britain to their side or at least could count on British indifference.

At the same time France, while retaining and indeed revivifying its alliances with Poland, Czechoslovakia and Rumania, is now also allied to Russia, the one European great power that would be excluded from the pact. For its part Great Britain, through the voice of Anthony Eden, has on several occasions declared itself opposed to the formation of an anti-Russian bloc.

IT REMAINS to be seen, therefore, how Germany and Italy propose to go about getting the four-power plan accepted. For their purposes it is even more attractive now than it was in 1933. It would mean, to begin with, placing France in a pocket; it would constitute an implementation on a European scale of the German-Japanese and the German-Italian anti-Communist pacts. And it would enable the Fascist powers to proceed with the task of treaty revision.

Do the Rome and Berlin governments believe France and Great Britain are simple-minded enough to place their heads in such a noose? Probably not. Rome reports declare Messrs. Goering and Mussolini recognize that a revived four-power plan is not a matter of practical politics at the moment.

Certain preliminary developments must first take place. The Spanish situation which has embittered relations between France, on the one hand, and Germany and Italy on the other must be disposed of. Then a new government must come into being in France which the Fascist dictators regard with more favor than they do the Blum regime, which they consider too much under the influence of the Communists. Last but not least, the Franco-Russian alliance must be broken. Then when the situation has been molded nearer the desire of Hitler and Mussolini the four-power plan can come into being.

It seems at first glance a case of very wishful thinking. But it is more likely that the plan was merely resurrected by the Duce to show the Third Reich that his heart is still in the right place so far as the German-Italian accord is concerned. If this plan is the principal product of the Goering-Mussolini-Ciano conversations German-Italian collaboration is, at the moment, a far less potent force than it has been described as being.

To hungry Germany, the Duce is promising pie in the sky bye and bye.

"Lady Anna"

By William Lyon Phelps

Realistic Fiction.

A few days ago I finished a contemporary popular American novel. It was up to date in every respect. It dealt faithfully and specifically with things that used to be taken for granted, without the necessity of minute description; the physical and emotional sensations of the important and unimportant characters—it was not always easy to distinguish between them—were given quite definitely. On thinking it over, all I could remember of the book consisted of various descriptions and lurid scenes of the nature I have just mentioned. I could not remember anything interesting or important that anyone had either said or done.

Lying on my table I saw Anthony Trollope's novel, written in the seventies. It has just been reprinted, in handy and convenient and cheap form, by the Oxford University Press. It is called "Lady Anna." I began reading it, and became immediately and vitally interested. It had no slum scenes, no blasphemies, obscenities, or indecencies of speech, yet one of the characters was horribly depraved, and out of his sins came the plot of the whole novel.

When I finished reading this book, I had no difficulty in remembering all the chief personages, and many of the minor ones. They all seemed to me absolutely real, and to act and speak as persons of that nature and, in those situations would act and speak. The author was apparently more interested in the minds of the characters than in their bodies. Their humanity, rather than their animalism, was what made him think they were worth writing about.

Years ago, George Moore met the great Russian novelist, Turgenev, at a French ball. A new novel by Zola had just appeared, and in response to a question, Turgenev said: "What difference does it make to me whether a woman sweats in the middle of her back or under her arms? I want to know how she thinks, not how she sweats."

Isn't the distinction between Victorian fiction and some (not all) of our contemporary fiction the distinction between human beings and animals? Animal passions, feelings, and impulses are always sensational, but are they always more interesting than the thoughts, and conversations, and actions that rise from the mind?

And is it not the mind and personality of men and women that distinguishes them as individuals, rather than those animal sensations that are common to all?

Dada And Surrealism

New York Correspondent Reports On Exhibit Of Fantastic Art Now Bewildering Crowds Along Fifth Avenue.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

THE EXHIBITION of fantastic art—Dada and Surrealism—now drawing to a close at the Museum of Modern Art appears to be a good answer to Sinclair Lewis' "It Can't Happen Here." It is happening here—and no mistake about it. Just what is happening nobody seems to know, but the crowds have been pushing in for a month trying to find out.

The effect of this unhibited exhibition of exhibitionists is to send the impressionable observer out with an impulse to buy a loaf of bread or a pork chop and stroll down Fifth avenue, using it as a head covering. To become a true Surrealist you have to do such things. A Surrealist film your correspondent saw in Paris showed a dreamy gentleman leading something along the street on a leash. It gradually became apparent that the leash was attached to a flat-iron. Surrealism is a way of thinking—or vice versa.

It all started in Zurich with Dada. Cubism had become unfashionable, having been founded, at least, on a rational idea. Futurism was still lusty, but sales were not holding up very well. It had amazed the bourgeois but hadn't knocked them for a complete loop. Hence Dada. Dada was a word obtained by thrusting a paper knife at random into a dictionary. Something just as effective might have been obtained by thrusting the dictionary into the paper knife. For the result was the Saga of the Gaga.

Movement Took Root In Post-War Germany.

THE MOVEMENT spread rapidly into Germany, then suffering dismally from the neuroses of war and defeat. There it developed a literary and political side, stressing the subversive, anarchistic and communistic, which is why the British suppressed a Dada magazine in the Rhineland. It was admittedly destructive and an attempt to reduce the world of thought to the chaos which its adherents believed they saw in the world of reality. Applied to art, it was a movement to end all art, or at least to end all previous concepts of art. Its disciples were the shock troops of complete disorder, prepared to shock at any cost. At one of its most successful and rabble-rousing exhibitions the only entrance was through a lavatory. It was that sort of thing.

Of course, the Museum of Modern Art is a pretty chaste sort of an institution, though with an incurable predilection for circuses. There you walk sedately through the front door. Even so, the museum is careful neither to approve nor disapprove the collection of pulse-stoppers it offers. But the shock is there, all right.

For example, the gentleman, or personage, or figure, or statue standing immediately on your left as you enter is called Agog. It is a construction by Wallace Putnam, a New Yorker, and is somewhat more than life size. Reading from top to bottom, it consists of a burst of dirty ostrich feathers, a tin strainer, a rolling pin, one end of which is fitted with a green glass insulator of the type used on telegraph poles, a pair of old rubbers, the cover of an oversized garbage can, a dainty muslin handkerchief, the front of a hose cart, two umbrella frames and a red light, the latter undoubtedly warning you to stop, look and listen. Mr. Agog, incidentally, is not Dada, nor, as you yourself might suppose, merely cuckoo. He is Surrealism, contrived with what the Surrealists, invading the garment field, call "ready-made." Among these object studies, also, and by no means the most bizarre, is a fur-covered cup, saucer and spoon which seem nicely calculated for the exclusive use of Mr. Agog.

Whirling Electricity Presented By Duchamp.

IF YOU CAN get past the whirling electrical apparatus provided by Marcel Duchamp, old hand at bedazzling the public and creator of the famous "Nude Descending a Stairway" which stood 'em up at the old Armory Show more than 20 years ago, you will find yourself knee-deep in Dada. Some of these pictures, or presentments, or whatever you choose to call them, can be better described by their titles than in any other fashion. One of them by Max Ernst, for instance, is called "The gramineous bicycle garnished with bells the pilfered gray-beards and the echinoderms bending the spine to look for caresses." But some of the Surrealist titles almost make sense, as witness Dali's "The Ghost of Vermeer of Delft which can be used as a Table," or Duchamp's "The King and Queen Traversed by Swift Nudes."

Max Ernst, by the way, is the cut-up of Dada. He "invented" a process called "collapse," which consists of cutting up old magazine or newspaper illustrations and pasting them together in funny ways. He got the idea, of course, from the cuttings which Picasso sometimes pasted into his paintings, but Ernst just romped away with it. It is impossible to understand what he is driving at, which is probably exactly what he is driving at. But as for the originality of the notion; busy little children were doing it in old notebooks long before he was born. He also offers another "new" process called "frottage"—rubbings on paper over various surfaces to produce unexpected effects. Here again children used to do "frottage," and doubtless still do, to simulate on paper the low relief of coins. Of course Dada isn't bothered by child competition. A number of drawings by children are shown in the exhibition as well as efforts by the insane. These last make excellent Dada.

It would be useless to catalogue or describe the aberrations of Dada, through all its contortions of wood carving or arrangements of odd materials. Duchamp's cageful of lump sugar captioned "Why Not Sneeze?" or Miro's stuffed parrot mounted with a cork ball on a hollow wood arrangement from which depends a severed woman's calf and slipper supported by a rimless derby, will do for all of them. Somehow or other, it is not very clear how, Surrealism sprang from this maniac welter. Surrealism rather pursues the marvelous as it springs into the mind during paranoia.

Surrealism Can Boast Several Expert Painters.

THE ODD THING about Surrealism is that it has produced several extraordinary (extraordinary in the sense of excellent) painters. Gone are the fantastic fly-specks and weird mechanical tracings of Dada, at least among most of the Surrealist exponents. Pierre Roy can paint. Hugo Valentine has a really beautiful group of Surrealist poets. Dali, now in the country and probably the accepted leader of the Surrealists, would be a distinguished artist in any company. Surrealists are inclined to disown Chirico—they say his rich colors and statuesquely classic abstractions are going academic—but he still knows how to paint. Picasso, no doubt included as the authentic old master, is regarded as tops by some.

Salvador Dali is the creator of the now almost fabulous "The Persistence of Memory." It reveals a bleak shore in a queer light with a strip of sea behind leading to distant cliffs. Clinging to sickly looking shells and rocks in the foreground are limp open-face watches, like molluscs, all set at various hours. It may or may not mean anything, but it is gorgeously painted. This, like the "Ghost of Vermeer" and "The Feeling of Becoming," is a little canvas. But they have a largeness which shows in reproduction and are all suffused with a strange, half-golden, half-silver illumination. "Daily Torments" comes more out into the cold daylight. It combines a disturbing mess of squirrels, cats, rocky protuberances and faces with running sores which somehow suggests the mental tortures of the neurotic. Dali paints with the meticulous care of the Dutch school. But, like Miro, he is a Catalan. It may be significant that Catalonia is the world's last bulwark of philosophical anarchism.

Dali could get by as a successful academic painter. But he would not be the leader of a school. He likes the public spotlight and is now lecturing here with pontificial unintelligibility, even dressing store windows on Fifth avenue.

His pictures have most of the Surrealist cliches—the severed limbs, the vistaed archways through the more or less human body, the eyes staring up from the middle of a slice of ham, the foliage springing from twisted fingers, the completely irrational relations of distorted familiar objects which they claim as a new rhythm. They insist that they are mining the subconscious to the utter and final destruction of "eyesight painting." They also say they are merely carrying on a lost tradition and one room of the exhibition is devoted to early examples of fantastic art to prove that medieval Surrealism persisted along with more conventional art. But this early divergence from the norm, this troubled revelation of religious ecstasy or demoniac possession, seems to possess a thread of comprehensibility which the Surrealists reject. To make the exhibition all embracing, examples of Walt Disney, Rube Goldberg and Jim Thurber are likewise given. But one can laugh at these without pain.

Surrealism just gives one the creeps. Like Cubism and Futurism, it may physic art to its benefit but the current results are pretty horrible. Yet jumbled into an exhibition it certainly makes a swell phantasmagoric circus. The show hasn't drawn the crowds that suffocated at the Van Gogh exhibition—Surrealism hasn't got into any best sellers yet. But gaping thousands upon thousands have stampeded out to snatch a bracer at the nearest bar. Nobody knows yet whether Surrealism is a live movement or a convulsion preceding rigor mortis.

Jackson Assumes Anti-Trust Duties

Attorney General Cummings named Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson yesterday to replace John Dickinson, who is resigning, as head of the Justice Department's anti-trust division.

Assistant Attorney General James W. Morris, in charge of the claims division, was named to succeed Jackson as head of the tax division.

Dickinson will become general solicitor of the Pennsylvania Railroad and will return to his professional chair at the University of Pennsylvania law school.

Hundreds Attend Harrisons' Reception for Gov. White; Woman's National Democratic Unit Holds Open House

Senator, Wife Entertain for Executive From Home State.

Luncheon Set for Today at Headquarters of Party Group.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The spirit of Southern friendliness and hospitality was abroad yesterday. Senator and Mrs. Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, entertained hundreds at a reception in honor of Gov. and Mrs. Hugh White, of that State, the first function of the series crowding one upon the heels of another during Inaugural week.

A line of cars on each side of Cathedral avenue for two blocks from the Harrison residence, and a slowly moving line in the center marked the place of the reception. Along the sidewalk and into the house guests moved double file up to the receiving line. There Maj. W. R. Woodward and Maj. George E. Hartman, military aides to Gov. and Mrs. White during their visit in Washington, made the introductions. In many instances none really were necessary for so many of the Mississippians in the gathering were friends of the hosts and of the guests of honor.

Mrs. Harrison wore a gown of brown lace with rose-colored flowers at the neck and a double strand of pearls. Mrs. White was in a gown of rose satin, with an ornament of old gold and jade the only trimming, and a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley. Senator Harrison and Gov. White wore in their buttonholes pink japonicas which had been sent from Gulfport, Miss., for the occasion, and a large bowl of which decorated one of the tables. Other flowers decorating the rooms were pink roses and white cala lilies.

Classmate Present.

Among the guests was Mr. Charles White, of Washington, not a relative, but a classmate of Gov. White's at the University of Mississippi whom he had not seen for years. The "line" was necessarily held up for a time as the reunion of the Whites took place. Mrs. White, of Washington, was also there with Mr. White.

Mr. and Mrs. James W. Buchanan, of Vicksburg, members of the Mississippi delegation, came with their cousin, Miss Ivy Lee Buchanan, of Washington. Mr. Buchanan is responsible for the advent in the Capital of "Queenie," the Democratic donkey which will make a personal appearance at the Mayflower tomorrow and will bray approval of the Inauguration in a radio broadcast when she is presented by Lieut. Gov. Snider of Mississippi, to Lieut. Gov. Harley of South Carolina, for Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Mr. Joseph Tumulty was one of the guests who came toward the end of the afternoon, and others were District Commissioner George E. Allen and Mrs. Allen. Members of the Governor's staff were in their blue uniforms with gold braid and gold-lined capes.

Dinner Also Given.

In the dining room, the buffet table was set, wives of members of the Congressional delegation from Mississippi and other friends of the hostess alternated in pouring tea. Those in addition to the women of the Congressional group who assisted were Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Mrs. Eugene Sykes, Mrs. William Kendall, Mrs. Robert Lacey, Mrs. Joseph Lamkin and Mrs. Harry Shutting.

Last night a dinner for members of the Mississippi delegation was given at the Wardman Park Hotel by the Mississippi State Society with nearly 300 attending.

Other State groups are having teas and receptions today and tomorrow and there is much individual entertaining, so not a dull minute will be permitted visitors here from all parts of the country.

The Woman's National Democratic Club is keeping open house at its headquarters, 1526 New Hampshire avenue, Wednesday and Thursday afternoon. The third annual club conference of the organization is also in session now. It opened yesterday with more than 200 delegates registered.

Miss Perkins Speaks.

A forum luncheon was held, over which Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, national committeewoman from Pennsylvania, presided. In the evening, the Secretary of Labor, Miss Perkins, and Senate Leader Joseph T. Robinson were speakers at a dinner, at which Mrs. Edward Meigs presided.

Mrs. Townsend Gives Luncheon

German Ambassador Ranking Guest; Artists Also Present.

The Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther was the ranking guest at the luncheon which Mrs. Lawrence Townsend gave at the Mayflower yesterday following her morning musicale. The guests of honor were the artists, Miss Helen Jepson and Mr. Ezio Pinza.

Others there were the Italian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvid, the Rumanian Minister, Mr. Charles A. Davila; the Counselor of the Italian Embassy and Marchesa Rossi Longhi; the Italian Naval Attache, Capt. don Umberto Cugia, Marchese of Sant'-Orsola; Prince Marcello del Drago, of the Italian Embassy; the Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen; also Herr Ernst Wilhelm Meyer and Herr Gustave Struve, of the German Embassy, with Frau Stuve; Mr. Leander McCormick-Goodhart, of the British Embassy; Mr. Michael Budny, of the Polish Embassy, and Baron Paul Schell, of the Legation of Hungary.

Also Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Lady Lister Kaye, Princess Margaret Boncompagni, Mrs. Thomas Phillips, jr., Capt. and Mrs. John Gibbons, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Flint, Mrs. Edward Reed, Mrs. Bailey Hastings, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Miss Stellita Stapleton, Miss Rebecca G. Wellington, Mr. Victor Ernst, and Mr. Edwin McArthur.

Mme. Rajamaitri Fellowship Guest

Wife of Minister of Siam to Be Honored Visitor.

Mme. Rajamaitri, wife of the Minister of Siam, will be the ranking guest at the World Fellowship luncheon at the Y. W. C. A. Thursday, at 12:30 p. m. Miss Irene Wright will speak on "Changing Customs of Spain With Special Reference to Women."

During the war, Miss Wright was employed at the United States Embassy in Madrid. Before then she had been a journalist and newspaper owner in Cuba for 12 years. She moved to Spain to do research on Cuban history and has written many distinguished works on the subject. For her services to Spanish culture, the King of Spain conferred upon her the Royal Order of Alphonso XII. She has returned to Washington to be on the staff of the archives of the Library of Congress.

Mrs. William Culbertson will preside at the luncheon, and other honor guests are Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Minister of Yugoslavia, and Mme. Yoshizawa, wife of the Counselor of the Japanese Embassy.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Just for a pleasant starter-offer for the day, how about some orchids? We really dread to look another in the face after the story we heard yesterday. In the afternoon Mrs. Cordell Hull, who has just returned from South America, with her husband, the Secretary of State, was the guest of honor at a tea given by the W. N. W. Club. Mrs. H., whose costumes are always noted by every one, was in brown, the jacket of her suit being trimmed with beaver, and on one shoulder she wore a trio of leopard orchids. With dozens of others, we were admiring the spray of blossoms.

It seems that among the many interesting things and places "done" on the trip was the garden of a certain South American. In it he had a collection of orchids—merely 4,000 different varieties of the exotic blooms. While we were endeavoring to recover from these figures, we were informed further that down below the equator, the flowers are sold for 3 cents apiece! That is just too much!

• • • •

Little Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, after seeing the array of colorful costumes gathered the world over, which had been given to the club by Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose for the sole purpose of taking care of the members when costume balls arrive on the calendar, has already picked out the one she will wear to the White House next time. Speaking of Mrs. Loose—and one more Mrs. Simpson story—she was wearing a very luxurious cape of silver foxes. After having seen her in several other creations of the same precious pelts, a friend remarked—"You have more silver foxes!—The only other woman who has as many is Mrs. Simpson."

• • • •

Parthena Stubblefield will be home today from her studies at Sarah Lawrence, and once again she and her chum, Betsy Simpson, will be together. Tomorow evening she will be hostess at a gay dinner party in her mother's home in honor of her schoolmate, Georgina Olin, who is here with her. Among the other guests at the dinner will be about six young West Pointers, who will be here for the parade.

Mrs. Stubblefield has with her Mrs. John R. Aust, wife of Judge Aust, of Nashville, Tenn.

Back to Parthena again. This young lady, who is a very great belle, has no use for social gadding. She is much more interested in her studies, especially writing. She is editor in chief of the Sarah Lawrence School publication.

It was a gala day at Mrs. Townsend's morning musicale, and it certainly seemed as though everyone was there. When we joined the large gathering the first persons we saw were two of Washington's tallest diplomats—the Minister of Hungary, Mr. John Pelenyi, and the Rumanian envoy, Mr. Charles Davila.

Inside were even more people. The Minister of Greece, Mr. Demitrious Sicilianos, was telling someone he liked the morning musicales not only for the fine programs but also because one met such nice people there.

During the recital—the artists being Helen Jepson, who "did" Nicolette delightfully, and Ezio Pinza, who certainly sings way down, down, "seven leagues under the sea"—we happened to glance up, and there, in the front box at the left of the stage, was the German Ambassador, Herr Hans Luther, leaning forward and not missing a single note. With him were the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, —her brimless hat with an unusual sweeping veil of black lacy net, and the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt.

'Way back in the Presidential box sat Donna Matilde de Suvich, pretty blonde wife of the Italian Ambassador, who had as her guests the Netherlands Minister and his chic brunette wife, Mme. Van Haersma de With, and another lovely blonde lady of the Diplomatic Corps, Frau Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy.

Others from the Italian Embassy were seated through the audience. Near us was Prince del Drago, and directly across the way was the Naval Attache, Capt. don Umberto Cugia.

Mme. Saito, who never misses a recital, was there, as were petite Mme. Okazaki, Mrs. Oscar Coolican, Mme. Lombard, Decio de Moura, Mme. de Prado, Mrs. Jouett Shouse—and the lively and pleasant group of the younger set, including the Matheson girls, Peggy, in a luscious, soft green knit, and Lucy, now Mrs. Frank S. Hight, in black; Anne Sterrett in blue and red, and Nancy Harrison in maroon.

PanhellenicUnit To Meet Feb. 13

Mrs. Meyer, Alpha Phi Member, Will Be Speaker at Luncheon.

Saturday, February 13 has been set as the date for the sixth annual luncheon of the Panhellenic Association of Washington, representing the more than 2,000 fraternity women in the city. It is to be in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel with Mrs. Eugene Meyer, of Alpha Phi, as guest speaker.

Members of the following National Panhellenic Congress Sororities are eligible to attend: Pi Beta Phi, Kappa Alpha Theta, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Delta Gamma, Alpha Phi, Gamma Phi Beta, Alpha Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta, Alpha Xi Delta, Chi Omega, Sigma Kappa, Alpha Omicron Pi, Zeta Tau Alpha, Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Delta Pi, Delta Zeta, Phi Mu, Kappa Delta, Alpha Delta Theta, Theta Upsilon, Beta Sigma Omicron, Phi Omega Pi, and Beta Phi Alpha.

The officers of the association are Mrs. John F. Warlick, president, Zeta Tau Alpha; Mrs. C. M. Jansky, jr., vice president, Alpha Gamma; Miss Marian Boyle, corresponding secretary, Alpha Delta Pi; Miss Helen Martell, recording secretary, Delta Zeta; Miss Betty Chamblin, treasurer, Phi Mu, and Miss Regis Dunnigan, assistant to the secretary, Kappa Delta.

Society Notes

The Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close will be honor guests at a dinner to be given Friday, January 29, at the Woman's National Democratic Club. The affair will be held at their headquarters, 1526 New Hampshire avenue.

The Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. W. W. Howes entertained at dinner last evening for Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Dailey, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Fellows, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Clarke, of Rapid City, S. Dak., and Mr. John J. McKeon, of New York.

Also guests at the dinner were their daughter, Miss Mary Senate Howes, and Mr. John A. Stewart, of Washington.

Senor Don Carlos Mackenhenie de la Fuente has arrived from London to assume his duties as Secretary of the Peruvian Embassy, succeeding Senor Don Rafael E. Ludoweig, who is going to a post in Argentina. He comes here from London, where he has been for three years.

Gov. Philip La Follette, of Wisconsin, will be the guest of his brother, Senator Robert M. La Follette, during his visit to Washington to attend the Inauguration. He arrives today and is expected to be accompanied by Mrs. Robert La Follette, who has been in Wisconsin for some time.

Gov. George Earle, of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Earle arrived in Washington for the Inauguration ceremonies and are at the Carlton Hotel.

Mrs. Walter F. George Cancels Engagements

Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of Senator George, of Georgia, who is spending the season with her husband at the Mayflower, has been obliged to cancel all engagements for the next few days because of illness.

Representative and Mrs. Fred Biermann, of Iowa, are expected to return to Washington tomorrow. They will be at the Wardman Park for the season.

Representative Virginia Jenckes has as her guest during the winter at her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street her cousin, Miss Mary Johnston, of Lebanon, Ky. Over Inauguration she also will have as her guest another cousin, Mrs. Elizabeth Johnston, of Greenville, S. C.

Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean has issued invitations for a dinner February 7 at Friendship, at which she will entertain members of the Women's National Press Club and the Newspaper Women's Club.

Mr. John Carter Vincent, of the State Department, and Mrs. Vincent have issued invitations for a cocktail party on Thursday, January 28, at their residence at 3226 N street.

Miss Janet Richards will be the guest speaker tonight at the Arts Club, addressing the members on "Affairs Political and International." Mrs. John Wesley Smith and Mrs. Agnes Wickersham will be hostesses at the dinner preceding the program.

Miss Richards was in New York last week to speak before the League for Political Education at Town Hall, before which she has lectured for 16 years on current events. She will resume he rregular weekly talks at the Sulgrave Club Friday.

Antics of Pooh-Bah, Ko-Ko Applauded by Society Throng

By Helen von Ebbighausen.

Tush—ash! The "Three Little Girls" are snickering, Pooh-Bah comes strutting, and Ko-Ko is mincing nimbly about the stage.

Not a sound from the darkened theater but the sudden loud clapping at the end of each song in the D'Oyly Carte presentation of "The Mikado" expresses the utmost enjoyment of a relaxed audience.

At intermission in the lobby the buzz of voices is even greater in volume than usual, though the crowd is smaller. And the wonder over the performance at the National Theater last night is expressed by Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador. "Amazing, isn't it, how time after time through innumerable performances the company maintains its joyous spontaneity?"

Lady Lindsay, her black lace gown contrasting beautifully with her silvery hair, was there with Sir Ronald Lindsay, and during intermission they were joined by Mr. V. A. L. Mallet, counselor of the embassy, and Mrs. Mallet. Also seen with them were the First Secretary, Mr. Philip Broadmead, and Miss Irene Boyle. Mrs. Mallet wore a full-skirted frock of black faille crepe, and Miss Boyle had on a gown of gold and pastel brocade and a golden brown velvet wrap.

Among those seen before the curtain went up were Miss Christine Long, daughter of the former American Ambassador to Italy, and Mrs. Breckenridge Long, of Laurel, Md., who was wearing a frock of Inaugural blue; Mrs. Louis Caldwell, wearing a coat of black galyak and a little black velvet tricorne; Dr. and Mrs. George R. Trible, the latter in black net trimmed with sequins; Mr. James Mann, Miss Evelyn Walker, costumed in tangerine crepe, over which she wore a three-quarter-length jacket of white lapin; Miss Isabel Flannery, Miss Virginia Randolph, in brown with a small off-the-face hat of black velvet; Representative and Mrs. Allen Treadway, Mr. Frederic A. Delano, Miss Mary Bradley, Lieut. Robert Campbell and Mrs. Morris Evans.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Wants to Finish School and Find Job; Her Fiance Wants to Marry Now; She Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a high school graduate attending business school here. I have been going with a young man nearly two years. Some time ago he was transferred by the company he works for to a distant State. He comes back on visits whenever he can, because we love each other. I accepted his engagement ring last fall, but mailed it back to him two weeks later, as I decided I was too young to marry.

• • • •

When he came for the holidays he said he would not go back to his job, as he couldn't, feeling the way he did. If he had stayed here he would have lost his job, which is a very good one, and then we could not marry for a long time. I accepted the ring again, promising to mary him next summer, and now he has gone back and is working very hard to save more money for our marriage.

• • • •

But the whole thing is this, Miss Haworth—I am not sure I want to marry this young, as I have always had a desire to work in the business world. He says I can finish school and get a job in the city where he works, after we are married, if I still want to. But it wouldn't be the same, I feel.

• • • •

This boy is very grand and has lots of ambition. He is well able to take care of me and I know he would treat me wonderfully. Everyone likes him. And while I have always liked a good time and never lack for dates, still I would rather be with him than anyone else. So what do you think I should do? Marry him and give up the idea of working (which I have always dreamed of) or maybe make him lose his good job by sending back the ring again? I just don't know what to do and something has to be decided soon. My parents like this boy and are willing for me to marry him if I am sure of my own mind.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR DISTRESSED: You might marry the young man next summer, as agreed, and find yourself so satisfactorily, happily and busily occupied being a wife that you would look back and wonder why on earth you ever thought you wanted a job in the business world. And on the other hand, you might marry him and never cease to fret because you had sacrificed the opportunity to try your wings in the business world entirely on your own. No one can say which might happen. Time alone could tell.

• • • •

Therefore, since you are so young and so undecided; so wishful to test your professional self sufficiency; and since you—and every young girl—should have provne her fitness to support herself in case of necessity before assuming the responsibilities of marriage; and since the wife of a business man makes him a much better wife if she has a realistic understanding of what his daily routine is, I think the common sense thing to do is to postpone marriage until you feel you are eager and ready for the experience.

• • • •

If the young man loses his job because you return his engagement ring, the fault will be far more his than yours. If he can't take the blow standing, he isn't ready for marriage either.

M. H.

What to Wear.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am going to a college dance two weeks from now. It will probably be a formal affair. What would be the appropriate thing to wear? I have a beige satin evening gown that I have worn once, which is round-necked and sleeveless, but I am afraid it is not formal enough. I received many compliments when I wore it, though. I want to look my best for the dance I am going to, but I have never cared much for backless evening gowns. Does an evening dress have to be backless to be considered formal? Would one rather low-cut in back with short puffed sleeves be suitable?

• • • •

Another thing I would like to know is this: Would it be all right for me to take the boy who is to be my escort some small gift—maybe a white silk scarf—in order to show my appreciation at being invited to the dance? Thanking you kindly for an early reply, I am, yours sincerely,

SYLVIA.

DEAR SYLVIA: I have discussed your fashion problem with Miss Ethel Ehlen, The Post's fashion expert. She tells me the length of a young girl's evening gown has rather more to do in determining whether it is formal or informal evening wear than the cut of the neck or sleeves. She says, furthermore, that really smart stylists never advocate extremely decollete evening gowns for college-age girls, even for formal events. She says your beige satin evening gown, as described, sounds entirely suitable for the dance you are going to. If you feel you simply must have a brand-new one, choose a dress that is just floor length, with modestly low neck and short sleeves, or no sleeves, as you prefer.

• • • •

Don't think of giving your beau a gift for asking you to the dance! You declare your appreciation in words, by telling him how delighted you will be to come—at the time he asks you, and by telling him what a glorious time you had, after the ball is over. You also show your appreciation simply by going, and you repay him fully—it is to be presumed—by giving him the pleasure of your society, and the pride he will feel in you if you are beautifully dressed and a good dancer.

Who Wants a Canary?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I raise canaries and I should like to give several to elderly persons who have always wanted a bird but perhaps have not felt able to afford one. To be properly cared for, their cages must be kept out of drafts and covered at night. They must have bath water twice a week in winter and every day in summer. They must have fresh seed, water and sand for the bottom of the cage; song restorer in a treat cup, and some bit of green—such as lettuce, celery or sweet apple—once a week.

• • • •

If there are persons who will write and tell me if they can give the birds a good home with a temperature of at least 68 degrees, I shall be glad to give them one free. My problem is finding the right homes where there are no cats. A little bird can furnish lots of cheer and happiness. If anyone writes, will you forward their letters to me? I have been ill and can't care for the number I have. I have 10 canaries to place in good homes.

MRS. J. G. C.

DEAR MRS. J. G. C.: I shall be glad to forward any mail which your unusual offer may bring.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

New Sports Jackets Go With Tweed Skirts

Paris (U.P.).—Many of the new sports jackets are trimmed with coarse peasant stitching that edges the front opening, the neckline, cuffs and pockets. The jackets are worn with tweed skirts that are cut swing style to insure freedom of movement.

The divided skirts that were launched a few years ago have not proved popular as they are unbecoming to all but the very slender woman. The jacket or sleeveless vest of suede or leather is invariably shown with a scarf knotted high at the neck.

Chins and Coiffures Are Clean Cut

An old-fashioned style is modernized for a young, sophisticated lady in the smart coiffure above. Note the upward sweep of the hair line, finished at the forehead with quaintly charming bangs. To offset properly this new upward sweep of the coiffure, chin and throat lines need to be firm and lovely in contour.

Firm Chin Must Be Preserved If Face Is to Retain Its Youth

By Ethel Ehlen,

IF YOU have been amused at the facial contortions of your husband while he is shaving, the laugh is on you because he has been exercising the muscles of his face every day, and undoubtedly has a much better chin-line than you have. Based on this theory, Rose Laird, noted authority on beauty problems now in Washington for several days, has evolved a set of exercises, aimed to make your facial muscles self-supporting, and hence give a youthful contour to your features.

ROSE LAIRD.

"When the muscles sag, the youth or the lifting power of your face is gone," Miss Laird explained. "Always remember to massage and exercise up and think uplifting thoughts; thus you overcome the downward tendency of facial expression and temperament that end in defeat plus an aging appearance. When asked when one should start in to be beauty-conscious and make plans to retain an indefinite youthful contour of face, this expert replied, "almost from the day you are born."

"One should begin in youth to prepare her face for an attractive old age," Miss Laird continued. "Mothers should teach their young children the proper way to wash their faces, which is, to rub out and up with the grain of the skin. Otherwise, muscles are dragged down, skin is stretched, wrinkles are invited and relaxed contours are developed long before there should be any reason for such unloveliness."

For Youthful Contours.

"Men grow old above the ears, women around the chin," explained Miss Laird. "A man's face usually starts out with a firm jaw and continues up and out. The reverse is true of women—their faces retreat from a good hairline to meet a Waterloo at the throat. Men don't show their age as quickly as women, until they remove their hats. It is appalling how many young men of today are growing bald. And yet, men spend more time on their faces constructively than most women do. A firm chin and jaw line must be preserved if the face is to retain its youth; good contour depends entirely on the elasticity of face and neck muscles. If these go flabby, it follows the face goes the same way, and no amount of creams, oils, masks, astringents and the like can bring back lost elasticity. Women realizing this, often too late, spend much money trying in vain to recapture youthful contours. How about the men? From about the age of 15 years they have been shaving, a veritable course of facial treatments?

"When a man shaves, he forces open his mouth and flattens and tightens the cheek muscles to get a plane surface. He juts out his chin when he is doing that tricky surface under his jaw, and pulls down his upper lip to keep from cutting his nose. When he fastens his collar, he stretches and exercises his neck muscles. All of these unconscious exercises help to keep that clean-cut jaw line that everyone yearns for. That bad spot, where nose to mouth lines start, is usually not noticeable on men, because of the shaving exercise. Except when a woman talks, about the only exercise she gives this part of her face is when she applies lipstick; compared to shaving, lipsticking is very tame exercise."

Chin and Throat Exercises.

Here are some of Miss Laird's exercises, both preventive and corrective, inspired by the shaving procedure of men:

Fill the mouth with air and puff hard against the inside of your cheeks and upper lip. Keep the lips slightly open and release the air in energetic little puffs. Tilt the head back (but not so far as to strain the cords of the throat), open the mouth wide and then slowly, with perfect control, like a slow motion picture, close it by pulling up the lower jaw. The first exercise mentioned can be varied by "puffing" while rotating the head—pretend you are chasing a circling bumblebee. All of these simple exercises, if done daily, will prevent sagging muscles, develop a good chin line and youthful facial contour.

"Of all beauty preparations, a perfect cleansing cream is most needful," advised Miss Laird, "Skin must be thoroughly clean to be beautiful. The kind of cream or cleansing lotion should be chosen in accordance to the type of skin—oily, dry or normal. You can give yourself a salon facial at home successfully if you know how to apply properly the concoctions needed. For instance, for stimulation and muscle tone (after applying the right creams), make a fist of your right hand, as though you were kneading bread, and walk the muscles up the throat to chin, then under jaw to lobe of ear and continue on, all over the face, following muscle structure and grain of skin. The same routine can be done by a pinching exercise. With thumb and first finger gently pinch the flesh of the face and neck. Lubricating the skin is also tremendously important, and an ounce of prevention at 20 will prevent wrinkles at 30 and thereafter. For the tired, dull-looking complexion lubrication as well as stimulation and exercise is needed."

Adolescent Skin Problems.

Miss Laird is also an authority on adolescent skin problems. While here she will speak at a girls' school on this and other youthful beauty problems.

"Acne and skin blemishes, so often thought of as necessary evils for the school boy and girl, are really not necessary," she said. "They are not only unsightly, as far as appearance goes, but develop self-consciousness and an inferiority complex." Under Miss Laird's supervision, lecture courses are being given in many of the Eastern schools. She reported that boys are even more interested than girls in learning the whys and wherefores of an attractive skin and careful personal grooming.

"It is absolutely necessary in these times to present the best appearance possible," she said. "If young people are going into business they should know that appearance counts when applying for a job. And, if a girl chooses to be a housewife, she should never look as though she did her own housework."

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Shingles and Cold Sores.

The affliction called herpes, a word meaning "to creep," is no respecter of persons. Whenever this particular virus disease manifests itself the "breaking out" first appears as a painful reddened spot on the lip (herpes simplex), or on the sides of the chest (herpes zoster). Distress and the development of a raised region that is exceedingly tender to the touch advise us of the situation.

In the zoster form, known as shingles, we can generally trace the lesions along the course of one or more of the nerves that lie between the ribs (intercostal nerves). Blisters (vesicles) soon form which vary in size. The reaction may be quite severe, particularly in older individuals who are run down, have lost sleep, or who have suffered some digestive upset. Occasionally the condition is the aftermath of a debilitating disease such as influenza or pneumonia.

Chest Favorite Site.

The pain of shingles may be erroneously diagnosed as neuralgia or pleurisy. In some instances there are fever, rapid beating of the heart and chills. Within three or four days the typical reddened spots materialize and in their spread may overlap one another like shingles on a roof.

While the chest is the favorite and most common site, nerves elsewhere in the body may be affected as, for example, those about the eyes. The eyelids become markedly distended, headache is quite frequent and blebs (blisters) may appear on the front of the eyeball. Because of the possibility of the formation of ulcers on the cornea with later interference with sight, it is necessary that the condition be attacked vigorously.

Keep Skin Dry.

We must understand that the lesions on the skin are not the seat of the disease. The difficulty lies in inflammation involving one or more ganglia (nerve depots) close to the spinal cord. Nevertheless, the local symptoms must be treated. Wet dressings or poultices should never be used. The important thing is to keep the skin as dry as possible, and for that purpose an antiseptic dusting powder is of value. For the relief of pain, dry heat, such as an infra-red lamp or an electric heating pad, may be employed. Ointments that contain a local anesthetic such as nupercain may be applied cautiously and rubbed thoroughly into the skin. To prevent the invasion of bacteria raw wounds should be kept thoroughly clean with enough antiseptic in the dressing to prevent their growth. A thin coating of ammoniated mercury ointment is usually sufficient.

Herpes of the lips, called fever blisters or cold sores, often follow minor infections or dietary indiscretions. A tender, swollen area appears on the edge of the lip—occasionally inside the mouth.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

—New York, Jan. 18.

IT DOESN'T take us New Yorkers long to catch on! After weeks of nipping here and nipping there in our usual dazed state, we finally upped and realized that local history has been made here this winter. Up to and including January 11, not enough snow had fallen on the metropolis to frost a cupcake!

ALICE HUGHES.

I have already interviewed some 114 Oldest Inhabitants, and not one of these venerable dodoes would admit he had ever seed anything like it. Our long snowless state simply bolsters the ancient crack that winters these days simply ain't what they was in the eighties. I, for one, am beginning to believe it.

Local kids are frantic, with the new Christmas sleds still in the hall closet, and the fresh skates ready, but no ice. If their parents had given them canoes it would be all right, with plenty of chance to practice in our gutters, as about 142 gallons of rain have fallen per square foot of pavement here up to now. I suppose it must be the Gulf Stream, which is blamed for everything from floods and fires to the potato blight along the East Coast.

And the poor ski-girls — how they suffer! Up to now all they can do is put on the ducky things and inspect themselves in the mirror, or else dawdle about on the borax mountains in the big Fifth Avenue stores. Miriam Less, who knows her Gotham shoppeys, tells me that one big emporium was assailed by over 100 girls wanting to return their unworn ski suits after the holidays—driving the management into a fit of the howling fantods!

But that's nothing! Think of William Averell Harriman, who has spent $1,000,000 fixing up a winter-sports heaven in Idaho, at Sun Valley, only to have the danged place suffer a winter heat wave for the first time in 53 years! That, pals, is real suffering!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—My Hollywood spy wires me that the California beauties are giving the highly eligible Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, our town's leading Younger Catch, a merry chase on the Coast, where he is now racing his hose string at Santa Anita. But this is old stuff to young Al, and my spy says that he is giving the sunkist peaches such a fast shuffle that it drives them dizzy. Alfred is a young man who just won't be had until he wants to be—and there's nothing to develop the art of ducking and twisting like the possession of a few million potatoes . . .

Add to the list of shows you must see when you drop in — "High Tor," Maxwell Anderson's third play of the season, in which Burgess Meredith, of "Winterset" fame, plays the lead, and we get a look at Peggy Ashcroft a charming gal from the London stage. Seems to me that Anderson has now edged Gene O'Neill out of the picture as our No. 1 play-maker — Nobel Prize or no! . . .

I wish sometimes I were one of our local Professional White Russians—they do seem to have such fun all the time! They've just finished celebrating their own brand of New Year, sopping up buckets of vodka and performing a lot of quaint native ceremonies. Prince Serge Oblensky, handsome squire of dames, who helps Vince Astor run the St. Regis Hotel, had much to do with the festivities . . .

Speaking of New Year's Eves, our Dr. Norman Jolliffee, of Bellevue Hospital, says that copious gulps of milk are the scientific cure for those morning-after staggers. Doc should know, since he runs that particular ward at the big city hospital. Well, maybe so, Doc, but my spouse, a specialist in such agony for years, says he believes with Prof. Robert Benchley that the only cure for a hangover is death.

If the President's venerable mother is one of our wonder-women for spryness and go, no less amazing is the widow of the late President Theodore Roosevelt. A year ago she broke her hip—an accident that often cripples an elderly woman for the rest of her life. Not Mrs. Theodore! After quietly commemorating the eighteenth anniversary of her husband's death at beloved Sagamore Hill, off she started the other day for Florida to spend the rest of the winter! What is there about the sturdy and enormous tribe, anyway? Such staunch folks!

Well, I'll Tell You - - - - - - - By Bob Burns

Since my friends found out that I was gittin' paid for writin' these articles, they've been givin' me a lot of good advice about the value of a dollar. I was jest thinkin' that a person's idea of the value of a dollar depends a whole lot on what he's used to. Of course, down home the value of a dollar seems to run purty much the same all over.

Not long ago Grandpaw Snazzy was out here. I took him down to Caliente, Mexico, and I jest thought I'd see what he'd do if he had all the money he wanted.

Well, sir, the minute I handed him that $5 I seen that he was a changed man. He went right in to the high-class bar room and he told the bartender he wanted a 10-cent whiskey.

The bartender said, "I'm very sorry, my friend, but we don't have 10-cent whiskeys in here." Grandpaw says, "Well, then, I'll go some place else—I can't stand that nickel stuff."

PWA Dismissals

About 300 of the 2,000 dismissals slated in PWA will fall here in Washington. A little more than half of the 300 are now on furlough and their status will be changed to "separated without prejudice." About 150 additional non-furloughees (if there is such a word) will get the ax starting February 1.

The setup in the field is similar, more than half of those to be dismissed being already on furlough. Two weeks advance notice and all accrued leave are being granted those dismissed.

One side-effect of the reduction of PWA personnel will be a reorganization of the investigation division. The staff, which at the close of the fiscal year numbered 88, has been cut by 15 so far.

The Treasury and Postoffice Departments agreed to keep mum on the arrangements for shipping all that gold to Fort Knox and so we can't tell you how those individual gold bars were wrapped. We did learn, however, that a special beaverboard lining has been installed in the underground steel chamber where the gold is to be stacked to prevent "abrasions" because of the rough finish of the chamber walls.

Chemist Cottrell

The awarding of the Washington engineering medal to Dr. Frederick G. Cottrell, TVA's consulting chemist in charge of fertilizer experiments at Muscle Shoals, recalls this story of the time he was a member of the University of California faculty.

The University of California is a huge institution—so large, in fact, that it operates in two sections, about 500 miles apart, each with a student body of more than 10,000. At the time Dr. Cottrell was working in the laboratories at Berkeley, and apparently was none too well known to the president of the university.

This estimable gentleman wanted advice of some matter of metallurgical chemistry, and he wanted the best advice possible. Accordingly he cabled to London, Paris and Berlin, asking who was the world's foremost metallurgical chemist.

The replies that came back were identical. They read: "Cottrell, University of California."

We don't know how to classify this little item—it might be called a prosperity note, but it's hardly cheering. The latest census of manufactures shows employment and production in the manufacture of caskets, coffins, burial cases and other mortician's goods has improved by well over 10 per cent since 1933.

Squatters

The United States Information Service played the good Samaritan the other day to a couple of squatters—yes, there still are such people in this year three of the AAA. Several years ago the couple settled on an abandoned Army reservation in Washington State and stayed there so long a bill was passed by Congress giving them possession of the property.

Last week the Information Service got a tearful letter from the couple, who have since come East, saying that Mr. Squatter had lost his pocketbook containing the deed to the property and please what could they do about it? The Information Service got the General Land Office on the telephone and within an hour the whole business was traced down and a letter was on its way to Mr. and Mrs. Squatter saying that for 40 cents they could have a copy of the deed.

You may have read the newspaper story about the Vienna, Austria, Animal Protection League sending 10,000 stranded birds southward by airplane—well, our own Biological Survey doesn't believe in hitch-hiking for birds. When the survey comes across stranded birds, like the flock caught in the Potomac last winter, it drops them feed, and it's left to the birds to eat up and fly on. In a planned society, no doubt, the Austrian method would be preferred. Apparently the Biological Survey still has a place (we almost said a wild-life refuge) for rugged individualism.

Postals

President Roosevelt remained away from his offices yesterday, spending most of the time in his study working on his Inaugural speech. His only callers were Secretary Ickes and Senators Minton, Indiana; Bankhead, Alabama, and Russell, Georgia.

Rep. Norton Aids Juvenile Court Bill

District Welfare Agencies See Victory Near for Measure.

Protection, Not Prosecution, Seen Necessary for Delinquent.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

When Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, makes up her mind something should be done, it generally is done.

That, at least, is the way Washington welfare workers feel about the chairman of the House's District of Columbia Committee; and that is why those who have long been interested in a new Juvenile Court bill feel that victory is in sight now that Mrs. Norton has announced that she expects to devote special attention to seeing that one is passed during this session of Congress.

Wheels really started turning to this end yesterday when Mrs. Norton conferred with Representative Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma, chairman of the sub-committee that held hearings on a new Juvenile Court bill during the last session of Congress, and requested that a definite report on the status of the bill should be given before the District of Columbia Committee on January 27.

"As soon as possible thereafter, the bill will be presented before the House," Mrs. Norton said yesterday. "I am convinced that the District must have a juvenile court that functions on the chancery principle and assumes the duties parents are unable or unwilling to fulfill, rather than as a criminal tribunal in which children are prosecuted for offenses."

Session Gets New Bill.

Last spring, Mrs. Norton introduced a bill to this effort in the House, while Senator Copeland of New York presented it before the Senate. It was referred to a committee, hearings were held, and amendments were made to cover suggestions made by persons considered authorities on juvenile court laws.

"And now we have another bill to introduce," Mrs. Norton said. "We have high hopes that it will be enacted into a law before the end of the session, thereby putting an end to the practice of 'convicting' children of 'crime' in the District."

Three months ago, the need for a new juvenile court bill was stressed in a series of stories published in The Post. At that time, it was pointed out that the court for delinquent children in the District is now a criminal tribunal—meting out to minors so much punishment for so much "crime" when it should function strictly on a chancery basis.

The legal setup for delinquent children in the District now includes, in fact, a juvenile court law that came into existence back in the era of hansoms and horsehair sofas—three decades ago, when it was decided that children should not be tried before the same bar of justice as adults. From then on, juveniles were prosecuted in a separate court, but it was still a police court. For more than 30 years, therefore, District delinquent juveniles have ben prosecuted as criminals.

Protection for Children.

Recently, a number of organizations and individuals have been interested in changing this tribunal into a court of equity, which is not limited by provisions of common law, and which has as its object protection, not punishment, for juveniles.

Almost three years ago the District League of Women Voters appointed a committee to draw up a proposed law in this regard. Mrs. Jesse C. Adkins, who at that time was chairman of the child welfare committee, headed the group, which with the aid of Judge J. Wilmer Latimer, John E. Lasky, Miss Laura Berrien and experts from the Children's Bureau, drafted the proposed law. This bill was presented before Congress last spring.

When it went into committee, a number of prominent persons appeared at hearings in its behalf, including Judge Julian W. Mack of the United States Circuit Court; Judge Fay L. Bentley of the District of Columbia Juvenile Court; Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, superintendent of the National Training School for Girls; Wilbur La Roe, chairman of the District of Columbia Parole Board. Hearings on the bill began so near the end of the session, however, that members of the District Committee felt action on the bill should be deferred until this session.

Welfare Agencies Back Bill.

Since that time, the child welfare committee of the League of Women Voters has continued its efforts in behalf of the bill and have enlisted the interest and support of a number of prominent individuals who have added their indorsement to that of the 70 District welfare agencies already backing the fight for a new juvenile court law.

The sub-committee appointed when the bill was introduced is still functioning. It includes the following Representatives: Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma, chairman; William T. Schulte, of Indiana; Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois, and Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine.

Discussing the bill in its present form, Representative Nichols said, "Three changes proposed at the hearings last spring have been made in the bill, but it is still basically the same as it was last year." He said further that he would be ready to reveal what the changes are as soon as they are approved by other members of his committee the end of this week.

Sewer Searched for Stolen Gems

'Snow Parking' Order Attacked By D. C. Lawyer

'Libel on Climate of City,' O'Connell Charges in Court Motion.

Charging that the District Commissioners fail to keep the best interests of the Washington public in mind, Attorney T. Edward O'Connell yesterday attacked as illegal the snow removal-no parking regulation.

O'Connell presented Traffic Court Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday a 13-page motion bitterly condemning the winter-time regulation as "cruel, inhuman, oppressive and wholly unnecessary."

Five points set forth in O'Connell's motion were that the rule is unreasonable, unusual, in force not for the good of the public but for the financial gain of a certain class, an unlawful use of delegated authority on the part of the District Commissioners, and an assumption that the promulgators of the regulation have the power to forecast and prognosticate.

O'Connell's fight, in a way, is a continuation of an attack on the regulation made by Attorney Charles Ford last year. Ford objected to the regulation shortly after it went into effect, but no decision was handed down until spring, "after," O'Connell charged, "thousands of motorists had posted and elected to forfeit collateral and had no means of redress after the court held the regulation unsound."

Last year's signs, however, contained the word "emergency" and the regulation stated for the "purpose to facilitate snow removal." This year the "emergency" clause was abandoned.

O'Connell's motion read:

"The attitude of those governing our city resembles more the attitude of generals in a conquering army, levying upon the helpless residents of a subjugated territory.

"The regulation does not take into account snow that has fallen and is now blanketing the city, but snow which may possibly fall."

"This is libel on the climate of the city," the motion charged.

Before Judge Curran, the attorney charged "avaricious garage owners, parking lot operators and common carriers" were responsible for the enactment of the regulation, inasmuch as it is "they alone who benefit."

The case was set for Friday, at which time the corporation counsel's office will attack O'Connell's motion.

Child Labor Ban Passage To Be Urged in Georgia

Atlanta, Jan. 18 (AP).—Gov. E. D. Rivers announced today he would ask the Georgia Legislature to ratify the proposed child labor amendment to the Constitution.

"That comes under the platform of the State Democratic Party," Rivers said. "It calls for co-operation with the President. I intend to send a special message to the Legislature on the child labor amendment."

Police, Burglar Tear Up Sewer, Find Only Silt

'Dress Suit' Garcia's Stolen Gems Irrevocably Lost in River Mud.

George Garcia, Washington's suave and nimble-fingered "dress suit" burglar, led an expedition of Washington police and employes of the District sewer department on a diamond hunt in a sewer at Seventeenth and K streets northwest yesterday.

The more than $20,000 Garcia is charged with stealing from wealthy Washingtonians was so broken up by his alleged New York "fence," or selling agent, that none of it, police feared, could be identified and returned to its owners.

Garcia told police he had dumped some of his loot in the sewer, and detectives, hopeful of recovering at least a small portion of identifiable trinkets, set out for the sewer with the District employes in the role of diamond diggers.

Silt Vainly Sifted.

Several bushels of silt were scraped from the sewer and carefully sifted, but not so much as the most inexpensive sort of a trinket was found.

From the sewer the expedition hurried to the disposal plant at Buzzards Point. There its luck was no better. Garcia and his captors returned to the Third Precinct Jail, all visibly disappointed.

Garcia, according to police investigators, disposed of his loot through Antonio Vasquez, his alleged fence, whose business was sheltered from eyes of detectives by a barber shop. Here, it was charged, diamonds and other gems were taken from their settings, the gold and other metal was melted and works removed from watches so that identification was impossible.

Always in "Tails."

Garcia is known to the police as one of the cleverest operators in his trade. Homes of the wealthy and hotel rooms in the city's swankiest hotels were his specialty. His working clothes were a full dress suit in keeping with the attire of his victims.

He scorned the cruder tools of his profession, jimmies or duplicate keys, forcing his way into homes instead by springing locks with small pieces of celluloid.

Health Center Boost Urged By Civic Club

Hazen and Allen Lauded for Civic Efforts in Past 4 Years.

The Lincoln Park Citizens' Association last night adopted a resolution calling upon Congress to provide sufficent funds for health centers which Dr. George I. Ruhland, health officer, has recommended.

Dr. Ruhland in his budget estimates asked for funds for two centers. The Budget Bureau cut this to one and trimmed the appropriation estimate.

The resolution was introduced by Dr. Frank Lady, who reported on public heath.

The association voted to extend its congratulations to Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and George E. Allen on their reappointment to the Board of District Commissioners by President Roosevelt.

The resolution commended Allen and Hazen for their records of the past four years.

Mrs. Reed Praised.

Another resolution of congratulation was adopted. It related to Mrs. Helena D. Reed, secretary of the association, and her appointment as assistant trust officer of the Lincoln National Bank.

Mrs. Reed, who is a member of the bar, is the second woman in the city to become a trust officer of a bank.

The association voted to ask the Capital Transit Co. to maintain a six-minute non-rush-hour schedule of street cars to the Lincoln Park area instead of the present 7½ minute schedule, after Alfred D. Calvert, vice president, reported on a survey made of transportation services.

Two new members, Miss Helen J. Sparks and L. L. Woolard, were accepted by the association.

Jacobs Report Hit

The Interfederation of Citizens Associations, composed of civic groups in the metropolitan area, referred to committee the Jacobs fiscal relations report after attacking it as being "unfair to the citizens of the District of Columbia."

A protracted argument that lasted nearly three hours and in which the report was bitterly attacked as being unfair, started when the special committee reported its analysis It was sent back to the committee without action being taken.

Officers nominated last month were re-elected for the coming term. They are Thomas E. Lodge, chairman; H. S. Yohe, first vice chairman; R. E. Plymale, second vice president; Judge Alfred D. Bailey, third vice president, and E. L. Bennett, secretary-treasurer.

The interfederation is composed of civic organizations in Washington, Prince Georges County, Md., Montgomery County, Md., and Arlington County, Va.

Tennesseans to Honor Gov. Browning Today

Gov. and Mrs. Gordon Browning, of Tennessee, will be honored by the Tennessee Society of Washington at an informal reception this afternoon at the Raleigh Hotel.

Distinguished Tennesseans who have been invited to form a receiving line include Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Justice James Clark McReynolds, Senators Kenneth McKelllar and Nathan L. Bachman, and all Tennessee Representatives on Capitol Hill, along with Mrs. Benton McMillin, honorary president, and other members of the Tennessee Society. Every Tennessean in Washington is invited to attend.

Police Seeking Witness, Pistol In Hill Slaying

Unidentified Man Hunted; Wounded Edwards Is Fighting for Life.

Detectives last night were searching for an unidentified witness and a .32-caliber gun to complete their investigation of the murder of Clarence Hill, 24, of 913 H street northwest, who was slain in bed Sunday morning.

Meanwhile, William C. Edwards, 27, Hill's roommate, remained near death in Casualty Hospital from a bullet wound in his throat inflicted by the intruder.

A young men still was held for investigation in connection with the shootings. This man was quoted by police as saying he had been drinking and did not know where he had been or what he did Saturday night or Sunday.

Detective Sergt. Walter J. Beck, who investigated the slaying, said Earl C. Coffey, 1239 Twelfth street northwest, was with Hill and Edwards Saturday night when they met the man who is held.

Coffey identified this man as a person who gave him a counterfeit $10 bill two years ago. An argument ensued, Coffey stated, and then the group broke up. Police believe the slayer might have gone to Hill's home looking for Coffey to avenge an old grudge.

Edwards told police two men entered their room in the H street rooming house and one of the men, whom he identified as the man now in custody, began shooting. One of the bullets struck Hill, knocking him from the bed. When he got out of bed to aid his friend, Edwards declared, the gunman opened fire on him, a slug striking him in the neck.

Sergt. Beck said the gun will be necessary as evidence when the case is presented in court. He said that without the testimony of a ballistics expert to identify the weapon which fired the fatal bullet, the case will be weakened seriously.

2 House Units Will Consider Fiscal Report

Rep. Norton to Assign Committees Today for Studies.

District Suffrage Issue May Be Delayed by Senator King.

Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, today will assign two sub-committees to study the legislative recommendations of the Jacobs committee on fiscal relations preliminary to scheduling public hearings.

As all standing sub-committees have been abolished by Mrs. Norton, two special sub-committees will be appointed comprising five members each. Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, will head one group, and Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, the other.

The meeting will be the first of the committee this year and since the assignment of six new members, four Democrats and two Republicans.

Inquiry in Two Places.

Kennedy's sub-committee is expected to confine its inquiry to the new tax measures recommended by the Jacobs committee, while Nichols' group will consider the proposed broadening of the powers of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the creation of an advisory council and other changes suggested in the District government setup.

The committee probably will be asked to vote upon the proposal of Senator King, of the Senate District Committee, that joint hearings be held. While several of the leading members are opposed to the suggestion, the Federation of Citizens Associations last Saturday night adopted a resolution asking for a joint inquiry.

No meeting of the Senate District Committee has been called yet, but Senator King said that he will bring the committee together some time this week.

The only urgent business before the Senate committee is the reappointments of Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and George E. Allen.

Delay Seen on Suffrage.

Senator King yesterday was named chairman of a sub-committee on national representation of the Senate Judiciary Committee, but he indicated that more pressing matters would delay indefinitely a hearing on the Capper-Norton joint resolution for District suffrage.

Other members of the sub-committee are Senators McGill (Democrat), of Kansas; Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska; Borah (Republican), of Idaho, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont.

Representative Nichols said yesterday that he is now engaged in writing a report on the revised Norton juvenile court bill, on which hearings were held last year.

Bill to Prevent LaborChiseling Given to Union

Measure Aiding Employes Will Be Presented to Congress at Once.

A bill which if adopted would protect workers from "labor chiselers" was given the executive committee of the Central Labor Union for immediate presentation to friendly Congressmen.

The bill drafted by the Stenographers, Typists, Bookkeepers and Assistants Association, an affiliate of the central body, was accepted by the executive committee at a meeting last night after complaints had been made that employers "were working a racket on workers and cheating them of just pay."

Some concerns, it was explained, hired an employe for several days, firing him without notice or pay as unsatisfactory.

NEW YORK, JAN. 18.

BERT ACOSTA'S daughter, 19 years old, now is being offered to the night clubs as a dancer . . . Christopher D. Sullivan, who last week wanted Jim Dooling's job as head of Tammany Hall, will have to battle soon for his own job as district leader . . . Twentieth Century-Fox has exercised its option for Gypsy Rose Lee's services—but the stripper won't be able to leave for the Coast until next summer. The option was picked up somewhat hastily when word came that Goldwyn was offering her $25,000 for one picture—without even a screen test. Fox also signed Phyllis Brooks of "Stage Door."

EVELYN NESBIT THAW was a guest at Laurel-in-the-Pines — which was built by Stanford White . . . Nobody has a key to Libby Holman's home—not even Libby herself. Two bodyguards are stationed constantly at the doorway.

"LAST NIGHT I noticed you reference to Alabama Pitts," writes Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Ossining. "Pitts is doing very well generally, and I am inclosing a clipping from the Charlotte Observer of December 20, which shows that he finished the season with a .396 batting average, which is pretty good in any man's league" . . . Chas. Siegferth, Brooklyn reporter, is being auditioned for a spot with Rudy Vallee's radio show . . . Russia's newest song hit is "You and My Guitar"—a Spanish tango . . . Natalie Chilvers, who is Katharine Hepburn's understudy in the towering "Jane Eyre," is the daughter of William Chilvers, former Chief Magistrate here . . . According to the Japanese press, and the English language papers in that country, there is no shipping strike on the Pacific. Censorship has banned all reports, lest people get ideas.

The B. B. C. has banned the use of the term "The King's English." They want it said "The King's British" . . . Frank Perkins' new song, "Cape Cod Cottage," will be published next summer . . . Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador to America, won't give his permission for local impersonators to impersonate the new King George—who stutters.

EDDIE NEIL was one of the ace-American correspondents who went to Ethiopia to cover the war there for one of the press associations. Neil did an excellent job of reporting and was most content, except for one thing. For some strange reason some of his mail from America was held up . . . In each town he visited, Neil was told that some mail had arrived for him, but was being detained . . . Now, almost a year later, that mail finally has been delivered, after following him across Ethiopia and Europe. The mail consisted solely of pamphlets sent him as a gag by his newspaper friends here. The pamphlets were from the Newspaper Institute, a correspondence school for would-be reporters. Their caption was: "Who Told You You Couldn't Write!"

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

HOLLYWOOD, JAN. 18.

Janet Gaynor has so many freckles, they break step across the bridge of her nose. Peas from the same pod: Tyrone Power and Johnny Downs. William Powell forgot to warn the buyer of his tricky mansion to tune his automobile horn to open the phonetically operated electric gate.

GAYNOR.

Week-end job I'd like: Custodian of Mary Astor's impounded diary. Henry Armetta acts that way off the screen too. Carole calls her funny-looking snub nose lap dog "Pushface Lombard." Joel McCrea worked as teamster on the first paving of Hollywood boulevard. Latest colony wrinkle: Glass walls with goldfish ogling from behind, instead of the usual tile for swimming pools. Jean Hersholt's fine collection of first editions makes the one-book gals giddy.

Sally Eilers smiles with her mouth, but her eyes rarely okey the deal. Sound alikes (especially in song): Eddie Cantor and Georgie Jessel. My idea of luxury: The private switchboard (with 40 connections) and elevator in Harold Lloyd's home.

At Bing Crosby's house the other evening we fell into a tell-all discussion of our childhood days. The Groaner was the bad boy of his old home town. Whenever a driver was jerked from his truck by a wire stretched across the road, or when the school band concert ended in a free-for-all, truant officers looked for Harry Lillis Crosby.

As nearly as Bing can remember, there were fifteen citations against him on the truant officer's blotter.

Perhaps there is comfort in Crosby's story for parents of other irrepressible sons. "Bad Boy Crosby" certainly turned out well.

When hints were first dropping here and there that Doris Nolan and Director Gregory La Cava were planning to elope (such an absurd rumor, for Greg is married!) a woman reporter from a fan magazine hot-footed to the studio. In answer to her query, "Are you and Miss Nolan already secretly married?" La Cava purred, "I'm flattered by the suggestion, but while I've lunched several times with Miss Nolan, I assure you, never have our meals together included breakfast!"

Today and Tomorrow Mark Longest Show Schedules Midcity Theaters Have Known, Even at Inauguration

Several of the Picture House Bills Will Begin at About Breakfast Time and Continue Into the Small Hours of the Next Morning; Loew's Palace Clarifies a Situation; Previews Pile Up on the Busiest Days of the Drama Desk Week; Gossip of the Current Theater.

IF BY Thursday the house staffs of the local downtown picture houses are not complete wrecks it will be because they are iron men and women of steel.

A glimpse at the movie time schedules appearing elsewhere on this page will reveal probably the longest schedules of performances ever arranged even for so gala an occasion as a Presidential Inaugural.

BELL.

In some of the midcity houses the performances will get under way almost before you have had time to eat your breakfast and will pursue a continuous course into the so-called "wee small hours" of the next day. The same thing will prevail on Wednesday.

Having been associated with theaters more or less all my life, I know something—I said "something," not "very much"—about the wear and tear upon the physical stamina, the disposition and the nerves that are imposed by catering to great crowds of people over such a stretch of hours. It wears you down.

The big show on Wednesday, of course, will be coming up Pennsylvania avenue, but the theaters still are hopeful that, as always heretofore has been the case, there will be a tremendous number of out-of-town visitors who will wish to see what the inside of the Washington first-run houses look like in close-up.

This was wholly true on the occasion of President Roosevelt's last Inauguration. "Forty-Second Street" and its horrendous special train, with all of the trick gadgets contrived to drive anyone completely berserk, played the Earle and a great number of the Warner Brothers' stars marched in the parade.

It will be recalled that Tom Mix and his horse, Tony, almost stole the show, when Tony went down on one knee and bowed respectfully in front of the Presidential reviewing stand in the Court of Honor.

So that's the way it goes—a big show almost 24 hours a day, both outdoors and in.

Now, if the weather man only will behave . . .

Although former Manager Stephen E. Cochran no longer is connected with the National Theater, it nevertheless seems no more than the part of simple justice to offer a reminder that it was he who was mainly responsible for the splendid succession of bookings with which we are currently being regaled.

For years he contended—with occasional aid from this department—that the National Capital had become a "two-week town" for the better things of the theater. It was due to his persistent battling that the D'Oyly Carte Company, which opened last night in "The Mikado," is here for two weeks; it was due to his insistence, also, that Katharine Cornell was persuaded to open "The Wingless Victory" here; it was he who wangled his booking dates so that it was made possible for John Gielgud, under Guthrie McClintic's management, to make Washington one of only three cities that will be permitted to see Gielgud's "Hamlet" outside of New York, before the star returns to his native England for a Coronation assignment.

I have no doubt that Manager Eddie Plohn will display comparable perspicacity, but, at the moment, it seems only fair to give credit where credit is due.

Loew's Palace is a little disturbed, one is led to believe, by erroneous impressions that have gotten abroad concerning the "international premiere" of "Champagne Waltz," starring Gladys Swarthout, with Fred MacMurray and an able cast in support, scheduled for Friday night.

This event, sponsored by the White House Correspondents Association, will occur at 10 o'clock, Friday night. The regular engagement of the picture will begin the next morning and the run will continue for at least a week.

Invitations for the premiere have gone out and the invitation list will consume a great portion of the seating capacity of the theater. There are, however, some remaining seats that are on sale to the public. These will be sold at the regular house scale of prices.

It will be a distinguished company that will gather in the Palace on Friday night, but the thought should be abndoned that this is merely a "ope-performance" showing of "Champagne Waltz." It is merely a "one-performance" tribute to Adolph Zukor, for a quarter of a century the head of Paramount Pictures, who will be guest of honor on this occasion.

Meteorological Note.

You may worry about this drizzle we've been having all you want to, but do you remember what happened when William Howard Taft was inaugurated? Boy, was that a "flareback." And Herbert Hoover drove up the avenue in one of the most torrential downpours I have ever seen.

Sings Katisha in Old Favorite

Evelyn Gardiner, the Savoyard contralto, as she appears in the role of Katisha in the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company's production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado," with which their fortnight's engagement in the National Theater was inaugurated last night. Miss Gardiner, of course, will be seen in a wide variety of roles as the repertoire of this sterling company progresses through two weeks.

It Walked in the Dark

An Exciting Story of Murder and Mystery

By AGEE HAYS

CHAPTER 20.

"Well, I wouldn't worry, if I were you," Larry said kindly. "We're going to guard all of you pretty closely . . . There's one thing I want to ask you——"

She looked at him fixedly. "Anything!"

"Simply this: Did you ever see any of the things Cora has seen in the night?"

"No, I've never seen anything . . . But I've heard the noises."

"You mean—the walking in the halls?"

She nodded, her brows drawing into a perplexed frown. "Yes," she said almost inaudibly. "Strange it should sound so much like a man with a wooden leg."

"A coincidence! By the way, did you ever find your key?"

"No, I haven't."

"Well, thank you, Miss Hunt. I won't detain you longer."

Sutton was nodding his head mechanically and disdainfully. "Well?" he sneered.

"Not much news there," Larry admitted. "Only that she's wearing an immense diamond on her left hand. Looks like wedding bells around here soon."

"Seems like a nice girl, though," Sutton reflected.

"Certainly an attractive one," Larry agreed. "One thing we can't criticize Mark for is his artistic taste." He stood staring from the window for a moment. "They've left, Julian's in his office. Frank and Lee are around in front, and the women are busy. It's a good time to investigate something I came out here to see. Bob, try this key in Mark's door. His was the other lost key. As soon as you've tried it come out the back door. I'll drop word in the kitchen that I want you to run an erfand for me. Now is there anything else before we go?"

The Hair Clew Again.

"Yes," I said emerging and rearranging the drape. "Did you ever find out what Mark and Marilyn were doing at that little house on the river road?"

"Jeffers said an old man lived there," Sutton answered dubiously. "Said Brain's bought eggs off him and Mark was payin' for a month's eggs. He had a lot of chickens so that might be true."

"Probably was," Larry added. "They'd know they'd be followed anyway."

"But why was the check torn up in the stove?"

"Said he blotted the first one. Had to write another," Sutton grumbled.

"Another thing," I had to know now that clews seemed to be unraveling, "what about that yellow hair you found in the kitchen? You and Julian both seemed to think it was important, but it looked to me like Cora's just combed her hair out there and left the combings."

"Combings don't look like that. They're different lengths and usually matted. That was straight and even—as if it had been cut."

"Looks like it was planted, don't it?" Sutton exclaimed.

"No, I don't think so . . . I think it was very much of an accident. In fact it is a clew that helps us. . . ."

"How?" Sutton and I chorused.

Larry felt into an inside pocket and drew forth the hair. "Look. Do you see anything funny about the end of it?"

Something seemed to be holding the ends together.

"Glue." Sutton announced.

"Right! It has probably come out of a poorly made false beard. Look at that picture."

The hair matched that beard.

"I thought all Russians were dark," I mused.

"Shows you don't know your Russians," taunted Larry. "They're almost as varied in complexions as Americans. There was a Germanic strain in the royalty at one time. They, especially, were often blonde."

Sutton's forehead was puckered with thought. "But we been sayin' all along the murderer wasn't disguised that night," he objected. "Peter reco'nized him."

"He wasn't disguised at the time of the murder, but when he wanders around at night he usually is—especially if he thinks there is any danger of being seen. That only proves——"

The Key Fit.

They went off down the hall, still talking. I made sure the coast was clear and dashed up to Mark's room. The key fit!

I'd never seen the inside of that room before. It was like Peter's—spacious and well furnished. Three windows on the north and one about 2½ feet high, with its lower sill nearly 5 feet from the floor on the west, also like Peter's.

I hurried downstairs and started across the hall when Cora called from the kitchen, "Bob, that you? The cops want you to do somethin' . . . What you s'pose they're up to Bob?"

"Gosh, I don't know," I assured her.

"Tell me what they want, will yuh?"

"Sure!"

Outside Larry and Sutton were studying something beside a window.

"By golly!" Sutton whispered excitedly.

"Look here, Bob," Larry muttered sotto-voce as I came up. "This is where the prowler in the long black coat was supposed to be peeking in the other night." He slid back a piece of casement and exposed a cable. "This is what he was doing and what Julian was talking about last night."

"What is it?"

"Somebody's fixed this up——"

"All they have to do is to reach in here and pull that cable——" Sutton interposed.

"Of course, we haven't tried it yet. But first, what about the key?"

He wasn't surprised when I told him it had been Mark's. Not wanting to be seen following them around the house, I returned through the kitchen door. Cora was waiting breathlessly. She hadn't been able to see us from the kitchen. I showed her the key. "He wants me to try all the locks and see if it belongs here."

"Aw!" she sighed. "Now, what for? Didn't he say why?"

I shook my head and left her, frowning over a pan of something she was preparing for lunch. I was glad she had to close the door to prevent the odor of food from permeating the house. She had told me the Brians were particular about that.

Secret Discovered.

Sutton soon came in. "Come on upstairs," he whispered, "and see what happens when Holbrook pulls that cable."

We'd barely arrived on the second floor when it began. Thump-thump-thump. In the third floor hall over our heads. Somehow, the association made my hair rise.

Another second, and the phantom footsteps were coming toward us on our own floor. Thump-thump-thump-thump!

We hurried excitedly to meet Larry. "Did it work?" he asked.

We told him.

"Awfully simple, you know. Anything the right weight and not quite round could be dragged between the floors. I'm——"

"Say!" Sutton interrupted. You haven't said what you thought about that key. But you remember after Alexander's murder Miss Hunt said there wasn't any key in the outside of Mark's door. She went back downstairs for a pass-key. How do we know she didn't bring this down and throw it out her window?"

Larry shrugged. "It's no nearer under her window than it is under Cora's. In fact, in between them. Get to thinking! There's a lot closer theory than that."

Suddenly Sutton snatched the cigar from his mouth and raised comprehending eyes to Larry. "Sure. By golly. Mark locks himself in, throws the key out the window and begins poundin' on the door. You bet. So that's what you was measuring distances for."

Larry nodded.

"Still Julian could of planted that key so it would look bad for Mark. That guy hasn't explained yet why he was measurin' steps under the window and tryin' the window just before the murder."

"No, he hasn't," Larry agreed thoughtfully. "Now I'm going to have the telephone company look up that job and see who put in that extension. You get one of the men to tearing up the floor and see what he finds."

He stepped to the phone and Sutton went docilely off to call one of the men. He was too eager to unravel the mystery to oppose Larry in any way. I had to go downstairs to work.

Thump, Thump Disclosed.

And events were certainly beginning to point to something. But what? Key and the cable! Russian. Julian Preston, Cora Hoyt, Marilyn Hunt. Jean Lindstrum. Lee Sen. None of those names were Russian. But he hadn't any motive. And yet—it was one of them—or Mark.

The Savoyards Rejuvenate an Old Favorite

D'Oyly Carte Troupe Opens Engagement at National With Perfect 'Mikado.'

By Nelson B. Bell.

THE CAST.

The Mikado of Japan, Darrell Fancourt
Nanki-Poo ..... Derek Oldham
Ko-Ko ..... Martyn Green
Pooh-Bah ..... Sydney Granville
Pish-Tush ..... Leslie Rands
Go-To ..... Radley Flynn
Yum-Yum ..... Sylvia Cecil
Pitti-Sing ..... Marjorie Eyre
Peep-Bo ..... Elizabeth Nickell-Lean
Katisha ..... Evelyn Gardiner
Chorus of School Girls, Nobles, Guards and Coolies

By the sheer artistry and dignity of their treatment of one of most venerable of the operettas by Sir W. S. Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan, the D'Oyly Carte Company from London last night in the National Theater opened their fortnight's engagement with a performance of "The Mikado, or the Town of Titipu" that took on all of the brilliance of a work never before presented before a Washington audience.

All of the old, familiar songs were encored, some until the singers were well-nigh exhausted, the comedy sparkled with a pristine scintillance and the production was one that would do credit to any premiere.

There was nothing during the whole delightful evening to give an indication that "The Mikado" has been on the boards for more than half a century and probably has been sung by more amateur organizations in this country than any other Gilbert and Sullivan piece, with the possible exception of the short, one-act "Trial By Jury."

The Play With Dignity.

A great deal of the superiority of this company, it seems to me, lies in the fact that they are willing to accept Gilbert and Sullivan at face value and not attempt to improve on melodies and lyrics that have been deemed classics for almost 60 years. They do not deviate from the script, they do not topicalize—if there is such a word—the verses of the popular songs in the score, but play with directness, intelligence and tremendous effectiveness collaborations that have never been matched in the history of the light musical stage in tuneful quality, humor and cleverness of tricky lyrics.

"The Mikado" is so perfectly known by every theatergoer that there is no occasion at this time to rehearse its manifold merits in story, songs, lyrics and characterization. The Mikado of Japan, Nanki-Poo, his masquerading son; Pooh-Bah, the functionary of many titles; Katisha, Yum-Yum, Pitty-Sing, Peep-Bo, Ko-Ko, the Lord High Executioner, who is faced with the disastrous possibility of having to chop off his own head; Pish-Tush and all the rest are as familiar as old friends who drop in to make a call every once in a while down through the years.

These roles all were played and sung with consummate skill last night. I especially liked Darrell Fancourt in the role of the Mikado; Derek Oldham, as Nanki-Poo; Martyn Green, one of the mainstays of the company, as Ko-Ko; Sylvia Cecil, as Yum-Yum, and Evelyn Gardiner, as Katisha. This is not to say that every other member of the cast did not give a fine account of himself. Everyone did.

Songs All Well Sung.

Miss Cecil's "The Moon and I" and Miss Gardiner's "Hearts Do Not Break" were excellently done and the lighter numbers, such as "Here's a How-De-Do" and "Three Little Girls from School," literally "stopped the show," as the saying is. Mr. Oldham, as goes without saying, scored in "A Wandering Minstrel I," Mr. Fancourt with "Let the Punishment Fit the Crime" and Mr. Green with "Taken from a County Jail" and "I've Got a Little List."

The second act madrigal, sung by Marjorie Ayre, Sylvia Cecil, Derek Oldham and Leslie Rands, was thunderously applauded. So was Sydney Granville's "I Am So Proud," in the role of Pooh-Bah, which he plays with basso profundo perfection.

Not only was this old masterpiece flawlessly acted and sung last night, but it was staged and costumed with an opulence that one hardly expects in these hardy old revivals. "The Mikado" will be repeated on Friday evening of this week and will prove well worth anyone's time, attention and money, Inauguration or no Inauguration.

Tonight the bill will be that perennial two-play attraction comprised of "Trial by Jury" and "The Pirates of Penzance," and I can not too strongly exhort you to be present. Here is artistry at its zenith, an integrity and a fidelity to the theater's finest traditions that may not be ignored by discriminating patrons of the playhouse.

Bred to Run

By Walter Haight

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX.

Modern Improvements.

I began to realize that I was getting old the following spring. I believe I was 6 years then. I noticed that I did not cool out as quickly as before. I felt a twitching feeling in my left front knee and at times it seemed to burn as if there was fever in it. Of course, Alex Hexton, my trainer at the time, would not know unless my knee swelled. Then again, I felt sort of stiff when I was taken to the paddock and, unless I was "warmed up" before racing, I could not do my best.

Hexton, a fine man and a good trainer, noticed this and ordered his jockey to give me a short run as the field went to the post.

I dreaded leg trouble but it was the inevitable in horses. Afterward, I wished my left knee had swollen while I was in Trainer Hexton's stable. If it had, I would have been sent to his farm and probably would have been turned out. Perhaps I would have recovered soon.

However, fate, or whatever it is that guides the life of horses, had other plans for me.

I was claimed from Hexton and it was my lot to become the property of Ike Sidney and his partner, Joe Crumper. Ike and Joe were horsemen of the lowest type—thank goodness there are not many of them. Ike and Joe knew all the horse rackets, backward and forward. They were as crooked as the Missouri River and they had less conscience between them than one of Jacob Hertzson's fleas.

My leg had been getting worse but still the swelling was not noticeable. Ike and Joe put me in a $1,500 claiming race and they must have bet on me. I ran fourth and they stod around and spat at me while I was being cooled out. They "sent" me into a $1,200 race the next, but my knee hurt me and I was out of the money again. Of course, they burned.

"I guess we'll have to give him the treatment," Ike said the next day.

I had visions of a veterinary being called and my knee being examined. That was not the "treatment" that Ike prescribed.

This was his "treatment."

They both came into my stall. Joe held my head. Ike got on my bare back. Suddenly something made a buzzing sound and then I felt as if I had been struck in the neck by lightning. I tried to squirm away, but Joe clung to my head and Ike kept the sharp thing on my neck. In a few moments the pain stopped. I was frightened half to death. I felt as if I wanted to run through the stall door, out into the field and into the woods beyond.

Ike and Joe left me. Perhaps this was some kind of treatment but I could not connect it with my knee.

The next day Ike and Joe gave me two "treatments." I did not get used to it. "Buz-zzzz" came the sound, followed by the pain in my neck.

The third day I was given a breezing on the track in the morning but I did not get a "treatment." I was to be raced. Nothing unusual happened in the paddock. The same jockey was on my back when we paraded to the post. I had some doubt about winning because of my knee but I was going to win if I could and try to be claimed.

I saw the odds on me, 5 to 1. That was a natural figure in this kind of a field.

The start was good. I was about fourth as we entered the stretch. My knee was holding up fairly well. I expected the jockey to start whipping soon if he was "trying."

I felt a sharp instrument strike me in the neck at about the spot where Ike had given me the "treatment." Here it was. That pain was going to strike me. Then I heard the "buz-zzzz! I was running like a wild horse now—leg or no leg—knee or no knee. I was trying to run away from that pain that would hit me soon. The "buz-zzzz" continued. I bounded to the front. I had won—BUT THE PAIN HAD NOT HIT ME.

Later, at the stables, I found out the whole rotten story. Ike, Joe and the jockey who had ridden me were dividing a big roll of bills.

"It worked like a pip," laughed the jockey. "Why, man, when I stuck the point of that horseshoe ring in his neck and 'buzzed" through my teeth, old Flat Tire thought he was going to get the battery. Talk about Man o' War, why Flat Tire would a tied him in knots."

I tied that jockey in knots the next time out—it took the hospital to untie him.

He buzzed in my ear, all right, and he stuck the point of the ring in my neck. I was near the fence. I stopped dead in my tracks and the last I saw of him he was flying into the infield. The track ambulance leaving in a hurry when the outrider caught me.

As I have said before, it's a funny thing how fellows like Ike and Joe, who thought themselves the smartest men around the race track, were always broke. Ike and Joe are still around the tracks—just a half a stride in front of the eight ball, if you know what I mean.

But that's ahead of the story. That short stop I made when I avenged myself with the jockey hurt me. My knee was swollen like a toy balloon the next morning. But the firm of Ike and Joe had the "treatment" for that. They packed some mud around my knee in a piece of gunny sack (the kind oats come in). I was surprised; the swelling had gone down some the next day.

I had thought I might be shipped to a farm somewhere, or at least be visited by the veterinarian. However, nothing along that line happened. Certainly I wouldn't be raced in this condition. Nobody would want to claim me. I couldn't get away from this monstrous pair. Miss Dorothy—Mother—I needed help.

But I WAS raced. Ike and Joe fixed that. Ike appeared with a big rubber thing that looked like one leg of a pair of rubber overalls. Joe held my head while Ike put in my leg. It fit rather loosely and was tied at the bottom. Ike brought a big bucket of ice. He packed the ice in between the rubber material and my leg. Then he tied the top by a cord over my shoulders.

At first the pain in my knee was more severe, but gradually the ice felt soothing and then I didn't feel it at all. About an hour later the rubber and ice were removed quickly and Ike rushed me toward the paddock. Thre was hardly any feeling in my leg. My knee did not

Santa Anita Racing Stewards Meet to Weigh Two Scandals

Los Angeles, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—The board of stewards of Santa Anita race track, juggling two major scandals at the same time—one a "doping" charge and the other involving a "ringer"—dove into a new huddle tonight and were expected to come up with the following solutions:

1. Exotude, 5-year-old mare nominated in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap as "Blue Boot," will be permitted to compete for the rich prize under its own name.

2. Northway Stables of Norman W. Church, whose proclivity showed a positive reaction to a "doping" test administered before it won a New Year's Day event, will be allowed to race for the remainder of the meeting providing a new trainer replaces Elwood Fitzgerald, now suspended.

To make the situation more bothersome, Eddie Kane, owner of Portden, which finished second to Proclivity in the six-furlong race, filed a claim with the State racing board for the winner's share of the purse.

The Exotude case, in which Earl Beezley unsuspectingly claimed the mare for $2,000 in Seattle last summer as Blue Boot, was handed to the Texas Racing Commission, under whose jurisdiction the switch was made.

Beezley, whose string of victories during the present meeting has earned the title of "miracle man," insists Exotude should be permitted to compete for the $100,000 prize "because I entered a horse which at the time was quartered in my stable, not the name "Blue Boot."

"I acted in good faith, and at the time had no suspicion that Blue Boot really was Exotude.

Paul Odessa, Texas turfman, admitted the hoax and assumed all blame in a published statement after Exotude, a 5-year-old, was raced in competition with horses two years younger, including a victory in the $10,000 Longacre Mile. The horse has not as yet been raced at Santa Anita.

Meanwhile, the stewards postponed temporarily a hearing on the Proclivity case, awaiting completion of transcripts of testimony already taken. The meeting will be closed to all but the principals.

Church, associated with the Hollywood Turf Club, which was refused a permit to operate a second track in southern California, charged "politics" as the basis of the "doping" accusation.

In a signed statement he said the chemist who conducted the test said "although Proclivity showed an alkaloid reaction when tested, I am unable to determine positively if the horse was doped."

A second test of Proclivity, after the horse finished fifth at a later date, did not reveal a positive reaction.

'37 Contract Displeases Newsom

Big Pitcher Balking at Salary Terms Offered by Nats.

Repeats Desire to Be Traded, Preferably to Detroit.

By the Associated Press.

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 18.—Buck Newsom, right-hand pitcher of the Washington Senators, said today he was displeased with the contract offered him and that he would like to be traded, preferably to Detroit.

"Mickey Cochran is crazy if he doesn't want me," immodestly commented the Hartsville, S. C., 6-footer. "I believe he would trade for me if he didn't know that it would just make a runaway race for the Tigers."

"Why, just think what it would mean," he continued. "With the new three-day stands, it would mean three victories for the Tigers every time they came to town. Rowe, Bridges and Newsom would take 'em apart without trying."

Griffith Unconcerned At Newsom's Demands

Clark Griffith expressed no concern whatsoever last night at the report that Buck Newsom was balking at the salary terms of his 1939 contract and had voiced the desire to be traded by the Washington Club.

Griffith did appear to be mildly irked, however, by Newsom's latest repetition of his wish to be traded.

"I have nothing to say," said Griffith, and then added, "Newsom will play with the Washington Club next season at our terms or he won't play in organized baseball at all."

Drive Started For Offense 'Break'

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 18.—Basketball may be a wide-open, riproaring game to the customers, but a big, noisy faction of coaches isn't satisfied yet.

In spite of the growing number of high-scoring teams this season, a determined campaign to give the offense a "break" is gaining momentum. The drive, involving the "3-second and 10-second" rules, will carry to the floor of the annual meeting of the National Association of College Basketball Coaches here in March.

The more-scoring bloc contends that the two rules, while serving the purpose for which they were intended, also have created a sour situation. They have, the group feels, combined to cut the offensive territory by more than half.

Aim at Repeal.

The "10-second" regulation, requiring a team in possession of the ball in its own territory to hustle it across the line dividing the length of the floor into halves, within 10 seconds, cut offensive territory in half, this school of thought insists. The "3-second" rule, which says that a player may not remain in the foul circle or the lane under the basket, with or without the ball, has removed a big chunk from that half.

The movement aims at repeal of the ten-second rule, adopted to eliminate stalling and to speed up play, and modification of the "three-second" section of the code. The latter was legislated into the book to do away with the bodily contact caused by the efforts of smaller players to guard a towering, sharpshooting husky who, planted in the foul-circle area, used his physical advantages to convert high, hard passes into field goals. Teams without a big guy for the "pivot play" spot near the loop were almost helpless against the strategy prior to adoption of the "three-second" rule.

Modification of the latter regulation would consist of permitting a player to remain in the half of the foul-circle indefinitely without the ball. He would have to get rid of it within three-seconds, however, the idea being that a player, especially a big, good one, would get many shots from the same spot, thus making use of the point-producing "pivot-play" technique from farther out on the floor.

Australia to Play In American Zone

By the Associated Press.

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 18.—The Australian Lawn Tennis Association announced today it would make its first challenge in pursuit of the Davis Cup this year in the North American zone.

The Aussies, Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist, met and defeated the United States at Germantown, Pa., last June, three matches to two. They were beaten in the challenge round by the cup-defending English team.

The decision of Australia to play in the North American zone probably will result in a debate as to whether the series will be played on grass or hard-surface courts. The U. S. L. T. A. was inclined to favor clay or composition courts a year ago, but finally yielded to pressure applied by Norman Brookes, of Australia, and the series was played on turf.

Capacity Throng Applauds Weissmuller's Swim Exhibition; Hundreds of Fans Turned Away at Post-Sponsored Show

Writer Slights Golf Champ In Review

By the United Press.

New York, Jan. 18.—Golf's All-America, announced today by William D. Richardson in the National Golf Review, ranks as tops in controversy among such mythical squads because not one of the established champions was given a No. 1 rating.

Richardson, veteran golf writer and editor of the Review, named Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, as No. 1 among the amateurs, put Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., atop the women's list, and selected Chicago's Harry Cooper as kingpin of the professionals.

Johnny Fischer, of Cincinnati, national amateur champion, was named for the No. 2 spot in the amateur list. Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, of Coral Gables, Fla., runner-up to Pam Barton, of England, in the women's national, was made third in the distaff group. Tony Manero, of Greensboro, N. C., was ranked fifth among the mercenaries despite the fact that he holds the National Open championship.

Haas, Kocsis Chosen.

He defended his choices by pointing out that triumphs alone cannot be relied upon, "the game being the kind it is."

Others of the first five in each group are:

Amateurs—Freddie Haas, jr., New Orleans; Charles Kocsis, Detroit; Albert Campbell, Seattle. Women—Beatrice Barrett, Minneapolis; Dorothy Traung, San Francisco, and Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City.

Professionals—Denny Shute, Boston; Ralph Guldhal, St. Louis, and Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa.

One of the biggest surprises was the omission of Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, from the "big five" among the women. The freckle-faced girl was listed among the first 13, "in no particular order."

Cites Stormy Weather.

In naming Goodman for the No. 1 spot among the amateurs, Richardson said that Goodman, red-hot favorite for the national, lost out in his semifinal match with Fischer, "in weather fit for neither fowl nor beast." Goodman was tagged as "our most dependable amateur." Fischer was named No. 2 since, "regardless of an element of luck he did win the amateur."

Miss Miley was placed at No. 1 among the women because she went to the quarter-finals in the British women's tourney, and to the semi-finals in the United States national and the Canadian.

The next ten ranking players in each group, listed alphabetically, are:

Women—Jean Bauer, Rhode Island; Patty Berg, Minnesota; Mrs. Leona D. Cheney, California; Marion McDougall, Oregon; Charlotte Gluttins, New Jersey; Kathryn Hemphill, South Carolina; Betty Jameson, Texas; Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, North Carolina; Edith Quier, Pennsylvania; Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, Pennsylvania.

Tommy Loughran Wins.

Philadelphia, Jan. 18 (AP).—In what he said would be his last appearance in a home-town ring, Philadelphia's 34-year-old Tommy Loughran won a ten-round decision over George (Sonny Boy) Walker, of Phoenix, Ariz., before 9,000 spectators tonight. Loughran weighed 189½ and Walker 197.

Little Amelia Blaser, who was a performer on the program, smilingly awaits the autograph of the famed Tarzan of the screen.

By John R. Vosburgh.

While a capacity crowd of sweltering hero-worshipers looked on in admiration, Johnny Weissmuller, the "King of Swim," gave a gala public instruction course at the Shoreham pool yesterday which wrote a new chapter in the sport's history in Washington.

Under the auspices of The Washington Post, the shaggy-haired Tarzan of the films gave the capacity throng jamming the hotel's Venetian natatorium a mixture of thrills and first-class instruction in the art of swimming. Hotel officials were forced to turn away hundreds, largely feminine admirers, attempting to see Weissmuller stage the first public swim lesson he has ever consented to give.

Mr. Tarzan almost missed making his regular stage appearance at the Capitol Theater when he was besieged by hundreds of autograph hunters after he had hurried to his dressing room. Only by making a public address explaining that he must return to the theater was Weissmuller able to make his way through his besiegers.

High mark, perhaps, of the former Olympic champion's appearance was the clamor of many of the spectators for him to splash water on them. Good-naturedly, Weissmuller responded and a number of onlookers were given an impromptu bath as it were at the far end of the pool.

Through the co-operation of the District A. A. U. and former chairman of the swimming committee, A. Earle Weeks, Weissmuller was able to give an explicit study of various strokes over the public address system. Following a clowning-diving act by James Shinn, of Washington, Weissmuller strode into the handsome Venetian tiled room where the hundreds of the faithful were braving a temperature which was at least 90 in the shade.

He was preceded by Willie McCormick, of The Post staff, who can't swim a stroke, incidentally, but whose promotion of the demonstration was giving to Washington residents the counsel of the world's greatest swimmer.

Gordon (Question-mark) Hittenmark, of the National Broadcasting Co., completed his introduction of the swimmers to assist in the demonstration and introduced Weissmuller. From this point on Weissmuller held the microphone. "Hello, folks," said Tarzan into Francis Hunter to Wed.

Greenwich, Conn., Jan. 18 (AP).—Francis T. Hunter, tennis player who won the national indoor singles championship in 1922 and 1930, and Miss Marjorie M. Franklin, of New York City, applied here today for a marriage license.

Hunter listed his occupation as a New York importer, and his age as 42. Miss Franklin, the daughter of Peter Franklin, is 30.

Bashful King Guckeyson Quits, Jilts His Queen at Sorority Ball

Bill Guckeyson, star athlete at the University of Maryland, and the Duke of Windsor, nee King Edward VIII, have a bit in common. Neither one gives a hang for a crown!

As a matter of fact, when Bill got ready to abdicate as king of the Delta Delta Delta Sorority's January Jubilee ball at the University of Maryland last Friday he didn't even stop for the formalities.

Before Millie Clemens, president of the sorority, had completed the coronation ceremonies, Bill, who is a trifle bashful despite his athletic prowess, evacuated the throne and left the dance hall—and his queen, too.

Bill and Miss Jerry Schuh, of Baltimore, had been chosen by popular vote to rule over the dance. The ballots were attached to the tickets of admission.

After Bill's abdication, Tom Birmingham, 125-pound boxer, fell heir to the throne, and reigned, so the story goes, happily ever after.

Louis Starts Training.

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Joe Louis and Julian Black, his manager, arrived in New York today and started at once for Pompton Lakes, N. J., where Louis will train for his New Yor fight against Bob Pastor, January 29.

Black said Louis weighs 206, 4 pounds over his fighting weight.

Temes Winner By Decision Over Pine

Burke Gains Unanimous Verdict Over Raymond in Co-Feature.

Joe Temes, a rugged local featherweight, was awarded a unanimous decision over Lloyd Pine, of Akron, after ten rounds of "slap as slap can" slugging in a cofeatured bout at Turner's Arena last night.

Jack Burke, self-styled Utah Assassin, outfumbled Lou Raymond, of Baltimore, in a welterweight bout that shared the spotlight. The 147-pound contest was marred by continuous clinching and too much mauling at close quarters, although both boys were trying hard enough, if that is any consolation.

Pine, a prefight favorite, repeatedly forgot to duck, time and time again remaining a stationary target for the little Greek's wild swinging wallops. Pine kept the fight from becoming a complete rout by once in a while shooting sort lefts and rights to the head as Joe charged in.

Irving in Victory.

Henry Irving, one-time king of local light-heavyweights, made an auspicious return to the ring by scoring a fourth-round technical knockout over Hunter Crostic, of Richmond, in a curtain-raiser scheduled for six rounds.

A right-hand smash to the body in the fourth round broke one or more of Crostic's ribs. He finished the round, but a boxing commission doctor refused him permission to come out for the fifth.

In another six-round supporting bout, Buddy Grimes, a Richmond featherweight, outpointed Mel De Shong, of Baltimore.

Bob Wilson bounced Joey Spangler around like a tennis ball to win a split decision in another six-rounder.

The converted southpaw welterweight floored Spangler four times with left hooks, but he was unable to keep the game Richmond lad on the floor.

Peter Kane Is Winner.

Paris, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Valentin Angelman, of France, International Boxing Association flyweight champion, was outpointed in 12 rounds here tonight by Peter Kane, of England, in an overweight match.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

This mysterious power Georgetown wields over visiting Pitt basketball teams felled the Panthers again last night at Tech High School where the Hoyas humbled their powerful guests, 30-27, in a thrill-a-minute game.

A crowd of approximately 2,500 fans saw Georgetown, given three boots in its collective pants by league rivals, tie the panting Panthers' tail in a couple of indissoluble knots with a whirlwind brand of basketball. Conquerers of Notre Dame, Navy, Northwestern, and leader of the Eastern Conference with two straight victories, Pitt hardly expected the rough treatment it was subjected to last night.

Hoyas, coming from behind twice in the final half gave their best exhibition of the season in knocking Pitt out of undisputed possession of the league lead. Carnegie Tech gained by the District team's victory, now sharing the lead with Pitt.

Panthers Take Lead.

Fabel sent Pitt ahead soon after the initial tap-off with a neat basket, which was promptly matched by Ed Kurtyka's. From then on it was a duel between Fabel, Spotovich and Lindsay, of the visitors, and Shore. The Georgetown ace's shots swished through with the sound effect of a toothless gent pronouncing "sir." But even Shore couldn't keep his mates on even keel with the smooth-passing Panthers, and Georgetown left the floor at halftime trailing, 17-13.

Georgetown forged ahead immediately after the second half got under way, assuming an 18-17 advantage on field goals by Bertrand, Gibeau and Bassin. Pitt, however, tied it up at 18-all on Selisnick's foul shot, and went ahead when Jesko converted another.

Bertrand put the Hoyas back in the lead with another pretty shot from the corner, but Urbanski offset this with a bucket for Pitt. The visitors seemed on the verge of pulling away to an easy victory when Zelisnick potted one from just beyond the foul circle; but Big Mike Petroskey, Tommy Nolan, Kurtyka and Harry (Bassin had yet to be reckoned with.

Playing with fanatical fervor, Kurtyka and Nolan located the hoop and sent Georgetown ahead, 29-23.

Petroskey, playing his heart out, was retrieving balls off the backboard with the definess of an apple picker. Nolan, Bassin, Shore, et al, meanwhile had forced Pitt to abandon its zone defense for the man-for-man style, a sure sign of impending defeat.

Georgetown's freshmen defeated Eastern in a preliminary game, 53-20.

Columbiana Upsets Dope to Win Del Rio Handicap at Hialeah

Le Blanc Hits Fast Pace On Filly

Jockey, Back in Saddle, Takes First Race in Several Months.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 18.—Columbiana, 4-year-old daughter of Petee-Wrack and Firetop which races in the blue and red silks of W. J. (Buddy) Hirsch, upset calculations here this afternoon when she easily won the Del Rio claiming handicap. Closing at 10 to 1, the filly covered the 1-mile distance in 1:36 flat, the fastest of the meeting, and won by two lengths. H. W. Jackson's Bulwark, the favorite, took the place by a length and a half from Cosgrave Stable's Jack Patches.

Columbiana had finished last in her previous appearance. She picked up 7 pounds in weight today, carrying 110 pounds. This included Hubert Leblanc, who was making his return to the saddle for the first time since he broke a wrist while exercising a horse at Laurel last fall.

Leblanc broke Columbiana in front from the inside position. Leaving the mile chute and entering the backstretch, the ultimate winner was closely bunched with Clocks, Bulwark and Furfiber. The Hirsch colorbearer opened up daylight midway of the far side, while Bulwark also drew clear of the others. Columbiana increased her margin after entering the stretch and Leblanc had her going easily as the combination reached the wire. Jack Patches was gaining on Bulwark in the late stages of the battle for the place.

Proph, $8.30 for $2, second choice to the dull-running J. E. Widener gelding Fencing, took the fourth purse by two lengths. Gala Star, one of the rank outsiders, gained the place by a length and a half from Lucky Jean.

Proph easily moved away and held Gala Star under control. Fencing broke slowly from the inside and never was a factor.

Wall Scores Double.

More Poise, in winning the sixth contest at odds of $15.30 for $2, gave Jockey Nick Wall a double. The gelding shook off Touche early and romped along with a clear lead. He got home by a length and a half. Scotch Boy, a long shot, raced well up all the way and held on to be second by a half length over the fast-finishing Spotless. Touche, heavily supported, gradually tired out of the picture.

W. H. Gallagher's Miss Apprehend, one of the few in the field of 14 maiden 2-year-old fillies in today's opening dash that had started, had too much foot for her opposition and clicked by two lengths in easy fashion. Blue Grotto, one of numerous paddock tops, held on impressively to save the place by a head from the fast closing Tall Princess, Miss Apprehend, an $8.90 for 2 choice, took the track shortly after a good start and drew clear under Joe Renick. Her time for the 3 furlongs was :34 flat.

Columbiana's Owner, Jockeys Summoned

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 18 (AP). Owner-trainer W. ". (Buddy) Hirsch and Jockeys Hubert Le Blanc and Ira Hanford were ordered to appear before the stewards to explain the form reversal of Columbiana, which won the featured Del Rio Claiming Handicap at odds of 10 to 1 here today.

The 4-year-old daughter of Petee Wrack—Firetop had finished last in her previous start here, but she had plenty of speed today, leading all the way and running the fastest mile of the meeting—1:36 to win easily. Ira Hanford rode Columbiana in her recent bad race, while LeBlanc was in the saddle today.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHYNO, $14.80, $3.90, $3.90; CHARACTER, $3.80, $3.50; BROTHER NEWT, $15.50.

SHYNO broke very fast, was hustled into the lead, raced CHARACTER into defeat and drew away easily at the end. CHARACTER moved up fast, attempted to race along with the winner, but tired badly. BROTHER NEWT closed gamely, finishing third in the middle of the track. OVER YONDER came through on the inside and finished fast. TORNADIC tired chasing the pace. SPEED made his bid entering the stretch, but faltered badly.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). The Biscayne. Purse, $1,100. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:41. Winner, J. W. Parrish's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COLUMBIANA, $22.00, $11.10, $6.80; BULWARK, $4.90, $4.10; JACK PATCHES, $6.40.

COLUMBIANA, showing marked improvement over recent effort, broke on top, was right to the front, displayed unusual speed and won nicely in hand. BULWARK was outrun the last half mile, but could not make the winner step. JACK PATCHES, well up, closed fast and ran a splendid race. CONTE came from far back in the last half mile. FURFIBER stopped badly. BROWN FEATHERS was outrun from the start.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-old nonwinners of two races since Nov. 1. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:45. Off at 4:48½. Winner, Mrs. H. Eastern to Test Roosevelt Five Today

Tech to Play Western in Series

INTER-HIGH STANDINGS.

	W.	L.	Pct.
Tech	1	0	1.000
Eastern	2	1	.667
Roosevelt	1	1	.500
Western	1	1	.500
Central	1	1	.500
Wilson	0	2	.000

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.
Roosevelt, 24; Central, 22.
Eastern, 40; Wilson, 12.

PREVIOUS RESULTS.
Central, 28; Eastern, 17.
Western, 24; Wilson, 12.
Eastern, 25; Western, 24.
Tech, 22; Roosevelt, 19.

The plot thickens today in the interhigh basketball mystery with observers converging on both Roosevelt and Tech High. Eastern's champions and Roosevelt's Rough Riders run afoul of each other at Roosevelt while Tech and Western renew relations at Tech, both games at 3:30 p. m.

Only Tech remains unbeaten in the series to date and Western expects to remedy that situation at once. Despite their recent 25-24 defeat at the hands of Eastern, the Western wicket-shooters still rank high in their own den. The Rough Riders, however, do not believe the latter part of this statement. Riding the crest of its recent upset of Central, Roosevelt is intent on putting Eastern in the same category with the Dark Blue, of Central.

Fridrich Formidable.

The chief source of trouble facing the champs today appears to be the formidable hulk of big Ray Fridrich, Roosevelt's rough and ready forward. It was Fridrich's 11 points which beat Central and Eastern's weakness all season has been inability to defend itself against one scorer de luxe.

It was Charlie Clark's 12-point rampage which beat Eastern when it met Central and Gerry Burns' late scores for 9 points almost gave Western a win over the title-holders. Consequently, Fridrich may mean the ball game today.

Too clever, however, appears Coach Herman Littman of Roosevelt to rest his scoring hopes on one man and it is highly probable that Capt. Frank Bailey or Joe Comer, center, may be the scoring threat today.

Eastern's last time out consisted of a 40-to-12 win over Woodrow Wilson. Despite improved passing and shooting by Eastern, the Light Blue had little chance to show just how much it had advanced, but in view of their win over Western Coach Mike Kelley's boys are now getting close to top form.

Lomax to Return.

Western may be strengthened today by addition of its veteran guard, Hop Lomax, who is back in uniform, but Coach Cliff Moore does not expect to use him unless his recovery from an infected elbow is complete. Burns will probably be Western's big threat, having scored 18 points in his two interhigh games this year.

The well-balanced Tech team, with its high-scoring Jimmy Vermillion, takes the floor gunning desperately for the upset it needs to remain the only unbeaten team in the series.

Crowd Is Thrilled By Weissmuller

the mike as he received a thunderous hand. "I'm mighty thrilled," he continued, "to get this welcome. I really am." After a few more remarks, little 13-year-old Peggy McDonald, his first subject, was introduced to him.

But the capacity throng reserved the loudest applause for "Tarzan" himself.

Late in the program the famed Weissmuller launched himself into the water, swam the length of the pool under water, demonstrated the sprinting ability that won him five Olympic championships and performed his famous sprinting start.

He obliged also by filling the confines of the Venetian Pool with his copyrighted Tarzan yell.

Roosevelt Jr. Quintet Wins in 28-24 Thriller

Baseball Notables Attend Eddie Foster Rites

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Down at Hialeah Park yesterday the track's stewards put into effect one of the most drastic changes in the racing rules ever to mark the turf. Put briefly, the new rule decrees that any horse which delays the start more than three minutes shall be taken to the outside stall and started two lengths behind the field.

POVICH.

Two lengths in a hoss race is, well, two lengths. A conservative estimate is that 75 per cent of the races run are won by less than that margin, so it is no mean penalty that the Hialeah stewards have decreed for so-called bad post actors.

It has been the pride of Joseph D. Widener, owner of Hialeah Park, that his track operates with clock-like precision in every detail and the delay at the start apparently has proved very irksome to him. But the remedy he has hit upon—the new rule of the stewards—is, to use the words of Pegler, like using a sledge hammer to knock a fly off a baby's nose.

The new rule places in the hands of the assistant starters even more authority than they now wield, and that has been too much. A fan's bet is virtually at the mercy of the starters who can contrive, if they wish, to get a horse off poorly, get him left flat-footed at the post or manhandle him out of position for the rise of the barrier. And detection of skullduggery by the assistant starters is very difficult, indeed.

Certain horses, otherwise good post actors, do not like to be handled by the assistant starters, but they quickly develop a run of temperament if hands are laid upon them. Any assistant starter who might have a personal interest in the failure of any horse can easily contrive to get that horse placed on the outside, two lengths back, under the new rule.

As an example of the frequency with which the new rule will be applied, the delays at the post at Hialeah yesterday are herein cited. The seven races on the program saw the fields at the post a total of 31 minutes, or an average of nearly four minutes for each race. In only two races did the fields get away in less than the newly required three minutes.

Paradoxically, if Mr. Widener's new rule is adopted by other tracks throughout the country then Mr. Widener himself may be the greatest sufferer thereby. Because it is Mr. Widener who owns the horses which, as a class, are the most notorious bad post actors of them all.

These are the Fair Play get. The sons and daughters of this famous sire, which is Mr. Widener's No. 1 stallion, have a long list of post delays to their credit. Man o' War, a son of Fair Play, was a notable exception, but the powerful Display was one of the meanest rogues ever to go to the post.

Despite Man o' War's reputation as an obedient horse at the post, his own get, the grandchildren of Fair Play, showed plainly the Fair Play strain. Such as Aegis, American Flag and Mars were the bane of all starters with their mean tactics, and Mars, on the occasion of his Preakness start, straddled the fence and delayed the get-away for more than 10 minutes.

Speaking of good and bad post actors, horsemen are unanimous in their agreement on one point. That is that the beloved Exterminator, "Old Bones," as he was called, was the most gentle and obedient of all horses at the post. Exterminator was a veritable equine statue at the barrier and, if you believe his fondest admirers, actually kept one eye on the starter, he was that smart.

In Short—

It was a shrewd move of the Nats to schedule an exhibition game at Gastonia, N. C., en route North from Florida . . . Gastonia is the home of Buddy Lewis, the team's third-base sensation and the town has guaranteed a crowd of 12,000 for the game . . . Gastonia first requested Griffith to schedule the New York Giants at Gastonia so the fans would have the chance to boo Bill Terry, the man who wouldn't sign Lewis to a contract . . . but who would be glad to pay $50,000 for him now . . . Catcher "Shanty" Hogan has been warned by Griffith that if he reports at an ounce over 225 pounds he will be forced to pay his own training expenses until he melts to that figure . . . Syd Cohen, who won eight straight games for Chattanooga at the start of the 1935 season, is sorry it ever happened . . . because it has earned for him the unenviable reputation of being a "spring pitcher" . . . Willis Hudlin, of the Indians, is the most notorious spring pitcher in the league.

Baseball Executive Dies of Heart Attack

Rock Island, Ill., Jan. 18 (AP).—Michael H. Sexton, honorary president of the National Association of Professional Leagues, died today in an apartment hotel.

Death was caused by a heart attack while he was recovering from influenza.

Widely known in baseball circles, Sexton was instrumental in the formation of the National Association of Minor Leagues. He also was known as the Father of the Mississippi Valley League which became defunct in 1932.

He was born in Rock Island in 1863.

A. A. A. Board Adopts Auto Specifications

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—International auto racing in this country received consideration impetus today when the contest board of the American Automobile Association adopted the International Federation's specifications for cars entered in major events.

The A. A. A.'s action, an important development in the automotive industry, removes the handicaps such as American riders and cars experienced in the Vanderbilt cup race at Roosevelt raceway on October 12 when Tazio Nuvolari, of Italy, made a runaway of the 300-mile classic.

Columbus Ring Team Opens Friday

Always well represented by capable talent in boxing, the ring team that Coach Jim McNamara will send to the post for Columbus against Appalachian College Friday night shapes up as the best the local law school ever has boasted.

This will be Columbus' fifth consecutive season in action, as it had teams in the field back in the days when the sport was conducted on a nonprofit basis, and in the four previous years it lost only three dual meets. McNamara confidently expects his men to go through the current season undefeated.

The roster includes the names of several well-known leather pushers who won their spurs in local amateur rings before enrolling at Columbus. They have been training industriously at the Jewish Community Center and will be at their best, physically, for the inaugural.

McNamara probably will start the following men: Billy Winters, 115 pounds; Ray Morse, 126; Mike Morton, 135; Bobby Rawson, 147; Dave Schlaiffer, 155; Harry Lewis, 165; Bob Grimm, light-heavyweight, and Morris Wolfe, heavyweight.

The squad faces an ambitious schedule that will bring them up against teams from the Citadel, Springfield, Toledo U., King and Hampden-Sydney.

Goodwin's 162 Tops Sanico Pin League

With a half-dozen teams waging a close battle for top positions in the 26-team Sanico Loop, the individual members of the league are aiming at the high average, game and set marks. Last night, at the Convention Hall alleys, Charles Goodwin, of the Sanico Doughnuts, pounded the maples to the tune of a 162 game for a new high season score, putting to discard the former record game of 152 rolled by O. J. Layton, of Stokeleys Vegetables. Aided by Goodwin's superior efforts, the Doughnuts strengthened its fourth place position with an odd game decision over Airway Coffee.

Green Bag Coffee protected its lead in first place with two wins over Sanico Cakes and in the race for high individual average, Bill LaBille, of Office, supporting a top average of 115-3, retained a 1-point lead over Tom Bradford.

Bureau of Investigation furthered its superiority in the Federal League by trouncing Labor three games, Astor Clarke paving the way with a 376 set. U. S. Senate humbled G. P. O. and PWA, led by Eddie Landrum's 145 effort, gained the nod over War. Veterans' Administration bumped Navy twice.

Rolling a season record set of 1,764, Big Print Shop turned back Judd & Detweiler three games in the Graphic Arts League. The leading Progressive Printing five bowed twice to Ramsdell, losing one on a roll off and the other by one pin . . . W. A. C. S. broke its deadlock with Standards in the Whats in a Name League, setting its chief rival back three games. Ruth Moran featured the win with 124 and 331 . . . Bill Krauss missed his record set by one stick in the Kilowatt League, shooting 418 . . . The Normans took undisputed possession of first place in the Procurement League, taking two from the Aztecs while the Saxons were losing two to the Imperials . . . The three top teams took a beating in the A. & P. League, Worthmore dropping its set with Bonday; Cold Streamers falling twice before Whitehouse and the last place Our Own five taking the odd game from Ann Page . . . Bill Kapanke (Marine Barracks) chipped in a 152 game for the best individual effort in the Navy Department League . . . Jarman and Maley shared honors in the Southern Railway loop, rolling 127 and 351, respectively.

C. U. Opposes Duke U. at Durham

Smarting under the sting of four consecutive defeats, all after hard-fought games and, in at least two instances, by close games, Catholic University's dribblers invade Durham, N. C., tonight for their annual contest with Duke. It is the only game scheduled tonight involving a local team.

Victorious over Navy and Maryland last week, Duke will be a heavy favorite to send its guest home on the short end of the score, but a review of the series between the schools presages a hard, close game. In 1934 the Cardinals won a 33-31 decision on their home court, and the following year repeated by a 31-25 score at Durham. It was in this game that Bernie Lieb, C. U. captain and center, gave one of the greatest one-man exhibitions ever witnessed at Duke.

The best remembered member of the current Cardinal five, however, is Hermie Schmarr, 200-pound forward, who tallied 18 points against Duke as a sophomore, and was personally responsible for the Blue Devil's defeat. This will be Schmarr's last appearance in Durham as a collegian at least, and he hopes to make the most of it.

While aided to some extent in nosing out Maryland, 35-34, by the Terps' loss of Charley Keller, who suffered a sprained wrist and was unable to continue, Duke, nevertheless, is still a top-flight college club. The Southerners displayed some of the best long-distance scoring witnessed in this territory this season against Maryland, standing off and popping 'em with unerring accuracy. Swindell, reserve forward, led the pack with four field goals, but the scoring was general, all but Bergman contributing at least one field goal.

Both teams employ a man-for-man defense, and while Catholic's scoring optic may not be as keen as its hosts, it probably has as much endurance and should be in there firing at the finish. Coach "Fod" Cotton probably will use Schmarr and Ambrose at forward; Capt. Zeke Brown, center; Sam Pagano and "Irish" Carroll, guards.

Duke's line-up will be Riley and Elwards, forwards; Herrick, center; Podger and Cheek, guards.

Gonzaga Takes Fourth, Defeating St. Paul's

Coasting to its fourth straight victory, Gonzaga High's basketball team swamped St. Paul's School, 42 to 7, in a "scrimmage" game yesterday on the Gonzaga court. Coach Orrel Mitchell's powerful Purple crew was scoring with such consistency that he used his entire first squad of 10 men.

Connolly, a guard, was high scorer with 8 points.

St. John's Prep Battles Central Quintet Today

The fast St. John's Prep five meets its fourth inter-high foe this afternoon at Central at 3:15 in a game previously scheduled for tomorrow.

The Johnnies, smarting under one-point beatings handed them recently by Tech and Roosevelt, and boasting of a 25-21 victory and a 22-21 loss in two extra periods with Eastern appear to have the best chance in several years of upsetting their old jinx.

National Guard Wins.

The National Guard five went wild yesterday to swamp the Collegiates, 92 to 9, at Fort Humphreys.

Deaf Teams Play In Cage Tourney

What is probably the first basketball tournament between all-deaf teams will be staged Friday and Saturday at Roosevelt High School, where Kendall School, secondary department of Gallaudet College, will be host to teams from Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. It will be a round robin affair, with each team meeting the three other participants.

The schedule:

Friday.
7:30 p. m.—Kendall vs. West Virginia.
8:30 p. m.—Maryland vs. Virginia.
Saturday.
2:00 p. m.—Maryland vs. Kendall.
3:00 p. m.—Virginia vs. West Virginia.

8:30 p. m.—Maryland vs. West Virginia.

Crouch Faces Statland In Billiard Tournament

With the defending champion, Gene Ruark, tied for first place with Johnny Dodge, the District amateur three-cushion billiard tournament begins its sixth week tonight with Everett Crouch and Danny Statland meeting at 8:45 p. m. at the Royal Billiard Academy, 816 Fourteenth streeet northwest.

Both Dodge and Flynn have won seven out of eight matches. Tomorrow night Dodge faces the able Gene Flynn and Ruark meets his big test on Thursday night against Crouch. The two pace-setters, Ruark and Dodge play on Friday night in the match likely to mean the championship. The tournament ends Monday, January 25.

On the Air Today

A sign reading "Girl Wanted" is hanging outside the Stoopnagle and Budd studio these days. After six years on the airways as an all-male team, the comedians have decided on a radical innovation in their act. They plan to add a feminine voice, thus enlarging the scope of their microphone foolishness.

Scores of girls are being auditioned as the quest for a versatile actress goes on—one equal to the team's antics. Prime purpose of bringing a girl into the act is for secretarial work (according to the zanies) in connection with such air enterprises as the We Do the Worrying Company and the Oh So Peachy Company and the records of the See-Ahead-O-Graph.

Our neighbor at Frederick, WFMD, is attempting something new and important for this area in the way of education by radio. In co-operation with the county's elementary schools, WFMD is broadcasting a series of poetry programs direct to school children assembled in their study rooms.

Poetry is only a trial horse. If the series pans out well, it will be extended to other subjects and installations broadened to include high school pupils. The station reports that everyone concerned is elated with the tremendous possibilities. WFMD is heard in Washington just a few points away from WRC.

My favorite violinist comes to the G. M. concert next Sunday night and I thought you might be interested in this little story about him. For Yehudi Menuhin is known to all as a "regular guy." When he made his Carnegie Hall debut ten years ago and the New York public went wild in its acclaim of the child prodigy, the thing which interested the 10-year-old most was an ice cream cone he received for his good work.

This same healthy boyishness is evident in a recent letter from Menuhin to his managers. After a lengthy description of a pet cat that had become a "member of the family," he said: "Now comes the great question and I will be most grateful to you if you can find out as soon as possible whether Muzio (the cat) will have any difficulty in entering with me to my native country. I know that dogs sometimes have problems, but about cats I know nothing. We have made all solemn assurances to Muzio as well as to my two little sisters, that everything will be well. Do tell us immediately by wire. I will write you soon about programs and other less pressing matters. Affectionately, Yehudi Menuhin."

6 Local Banks AmongNation's 300 Largest

Chase National of N. Y. Leads U. S. With Deposits of Over 2 Billion.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 18.—The 1937 roll call for the 300 largest commercial banks and trust companies among the 15,750 in the United States is published today in the American Banker. Places among the leading 300 are held by the following Washington banks:

Rank.		Deposits.
68	Riggs National Bank	$100,806,799
118	Am. Sec. & Trust Co.	52,130,373
203	Nat'l. Met. Bank	28,568,390
231	Wash. Loan & Trust Co.	24,746,661
237	Hamilton Nat'l. Bank	22,006,241
291	Nat'l. Sav. & Trust Co.	18,771,448

The largest bank in the United States this year is the Chase National Bank of New York, with deposits of $2,286,209,092, which compares with $2,075,121,091 a year ago. The remainder of the ten first banks of the country rank as follows, as of December 31, 1936:

Rank.		Deposits.
2.	Guar. Trust Co. of N. Y.	$1,744,810,010
3.	Natl. City Bank of New York	1,713,840,229
4.	Bank of America N. T. & S. A., San Francisco.	1,298,976,759
5.	Continental Illinois Natl. Bk. & Trust Co., Chicago	1,109,980,393
6.	Bankers Trust Co., New York City	953,821,161
7.	First Natl. Bank, Chicago.	922,206,804
8.	Central Hanover Bk. & Tr. Co., N. Y. C.	879,465,253
9.	First Natl. Bank, Boston	652,386,954
10.	Manufacturers Trust Co., N. Y. C.	631,405,867

Banks of the nation are carrying the greatest deposit load in history, a total of over $60,500,000,000, of which $50,400,000,000 are in commercial banks and $10,100,000,000 in mutual savings banks, the American Banker estimates. Totals for the United States now even exceed the peak figures set in 1929 and 1930. Deposits in all United States banks gained $5,000,000,000 last year, making the increase in the two years since the low point in 1934 over $10,000,000,000.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, a Special Correspondent.

Stocks Divide on Opposing Sides With Motors Losing; U. S. Bonds Lower.

New York, Jan. 18.—On a turnover of around 2,900,000 shares the stock market moved uncertainly and gains and losses were well mixed at the close. During the morning the tendency of trading was to increase as prices weakened or vice versa, but the afternoon was given over to dull irregularity. Government bonds gain softened, seeming to be able to hold firm only occasionally. May wheat closed ⅛ of a cent higher at 132¾ cents a bushel.

Stock markets were less interesting, a reflection of the week-end news budget. Some disappointment at the opening was felt over the indication that a relapse had been suffered in the labor negotiations in the General Motors plants, and later information brought no improvemen.. Optimism in the steel industry continued. Emphasis is nevertheless placed on the importance of an early settlement of the motor strikes and also on the ability of steel makers to avoid similar troubles.

Steel Expands.

Operations of the steel industry for this week are estimated at 80.6 per cent of capacity, the best level reached since the depression. Last week a slump carried the operating rate down to 78.8 per cent. A year ago it was only 49.9 per cent. Obvisously little adverse effect has yet been felt because of the motor order cancellations, but some anticipation of a recovery may be shown in steel mill output. Floods in the West are not especially happy developments, but the possible damage likely will be less than losses occasioned by a severe winter. At any rate the outlook for large crops next summer is improved.

On the trade side some ground for optimism may be found in the coming visit to this country of Walter Runciman, who heads the British Board of Trade. Sir Otto Niemeyer, formerly a high Treasury official, but now an officer of the Bank of England, also is coming. Sir Otto's work in debt settlements and financial arrangements in other countries in the past gives some color to the reports that the British visit will be concerned with a war debt settlement. That supposition finds little support in the financial district, where it is believed that the time is not yet propitious for work more definite than that done in the so-called three-party agreements on exchange control funds and gold.

Trade Promoters.

It is believed here that the Niemeyer mission will be concerned partly with defaulted South American bonds and will wish to secure equal treatment for British creditors in any plans that may be worked out. A few years ago Sir Otto gave Brazil expert advice on banking matters, public finance and debts. He made recommendations, some of which were incorporated in the foreign debt adjustment plan of 1934. This plan provides for revision not later than the end of September, 1937, with consultation of representatives of foreign creditors.

More than likely Sir Otto will act while here in an advisory capacity to Walter Runciman, who is believed to be coming on a trade mission. His position as head of the board of trade is a combination of the functions of our own Department of Commerce and a part of those of our State Department. His authority and ability amply qualify him to act as a negotiator af trade agreements on behalf of Great Britain. The visit of the two eminent Britons looks to be one of trade rather than of finance, and anything that promises to promote foreign trade is worth trying.

Motors Drop.

Stocks were irregular throughout, sometimes the majority of price changes being higher and sometimes lower. Leading stocks were divided, the steels being mostly higher and the motors working lower. Motor shares lost from a fraction to more than 3 points. Even Yellow Truck weakened. Motor accessories moved in sympathy with the main stocks, losing as much as a point. Motor Products and Briggs were prominent.

Coppers and silvers drew some attention from the sellers, and some of them gave up 1 to 2 points. United States Steel reached a new top above 85, the best since 1931, in the early dealings, but could not hold the gain. Republic was firm.

Chicago Livestock.

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—HOGS—Receipts, 24,000, including 5,000 direct; light and medium weights around steady with Friday's average to shippers; others weak, tending lower; sows weak to 10 lower; extreme top, 10.45; bulk good and choice 180-300 pound, 10.20@10.35; best sows early 9.85.

CATTLE—Receipts, 17,000; calves, 1,500; fed steers and yearlings unusually slow; undertone 25@50 lower; choice to prime grades sharing decline in face of narrow shipper outlet due to recent declines in dressed beef along Atlantic Seaboard; medium to good grades predominating in crop sharing general downturn; common steers and all the stock weak to 25 lower; largely steer and heifer run with most heifers grading medium; good to choice grade offerings steady to 25 lower; very little here being well finished enough to sell above 9.50; cows weak to 25 lower with cutter grades weak; bulls steady at 6.65 down; vealers, 50 lower, mostly 12.00 down; stockers and feeders dull in sympathy with slow killer market.

SHEEP—Receipts, 19,000, including 4,000 direct; practically no early sales fat lambs; early bids 25 or more lower; indications around 25 lower than Friday's general trade with prospective top around 10.25; fat sheep barely steady.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press

Inaction and narrowness continued as the predominant characteristics of foreign exchange markets yesterday.

Sterling and French francs were unchanged in New York dealings. Belgian and Swiss monies were a shade lower. In Paris and London the dollar showed little change from previous sessions in relation to sterling and francs.

Steel Operations Pass 80 Per Cent

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week advanced 1.8 points to 80.6 per cent of capacity, a peak since the final week of February, 1930. The rate compared with 78.8 last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations averaged 77.0 per cent of capacity, while a year ago the rate was 49.9 per cent.

National Steel advanced well over a point. Fractional losses were taken in the majority of the rails.

Public utility prices were not greatly changed. American & Foreign Power stocks continue strong and active. Consolidated Edison was busy, but failed to get any where. General Gas, a low priced issue, was active. Mail orders and amusements were lower. Chemicals and oils were mixed. Texas & Pacific Land and Panhandle Producing moved ahead.

Some diversion in the late trading was caused by a buying movement in the coal stocks. Food shares also hardened.

Foreign Debts.

Ability to pay and willingness so to do have for a long time been in striking contrast in many foreign countries, in the view of some observers. Complaints on that score are particularly caustic as regards some of the South American defaulters. Referring to the German position, the foreign news editor of the London Financial News writes: "Were it not for these causes—excessive rearmament, foreign debt repatriation (re-purchase by the Reichsbank of German foreign bonds selling at depreciated prices because of default), political expenditure abroad—the German balance of payments would show a surplus more than large enough to meet Germany's entire demand for raw materials and foodstuffs, and permit fair treatment of her foreign creditors. In the circumstances a transfer of colonies to Germany would not be an act of economic sanity. It would merely improve her strategic position and provide her with jumping-off places for the conquest of an empire." Meanwhile the confidence of certain New York bankers in ultimate collection of the remainder of their German loans seems firm as ever.

U. S. Steel.

Plans announced by President Irvin of the United States Steel Corporation to spend $60,000,000 more for the improvement and expansion of mills in the Pittsburgh district continued to exercise a bullish effect on the stock. In conjunction with the opening recently of a new process rolling mill, the program seems to be an answer to those lay critics who in the past few years have had so much to say about the gains made by independent companies on Big Steel. The corporation looks to be far from senility, and much of the current strength in Steel common, no doubt, could be traced to enthusiastic buyers in the Pittsburgh area. Some of them had feared that, if the new expenditures were voted, the money might go to the Great Lakes region.

Correspondent Divides Major Nations Into Two Groups.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Sir Wilmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, addressing the District of Columbia Association at a dinner at the Hotel Willard last night, emphasized the importance of social welfare, not only to bankers but in its international implication. Thomas J. Groom, vice president of the Bank of Commerce and Savings and first vice president of the association, presided at the dinner.

"I should like to point my remarks first," said Sir Wilmott, "to the question of social welfare, because it has a large international implication, and can be considered in a universal aspect before we come to its national importance. It has become a truism that all great nations today are at least alike in this: That they are endeavoring to control the economic process.

"Having said so much we must ask to what end the control of the economic process is sought, and here we find that the principal countries of the world divide into two groups. In the first (let us say, the United States, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland and the Scandinavian countries) the primary objective may be described as social welfare. In the second (Germany, Italy and Japan) what is sought is rather an aggrandizement of the striking power of the state. Between the two groups stands Russia, which seeks ends comparable with those of the first, but which has used means generally resembling those of the second, and whose future purposes and development are unpredictable.

Striking Power.

"In all fairness let it be said that the so-called social welfare countries by no means leave striking power out of their calculations, and that the power countries earnestly profess their concern with social welfare. Not to do so would be a form of suicide for either. The social welfare countries must today be strong in the interest of self-protection, and equally the power countries must soften the rigidities of their system with some concern for the mass of the people, or domestic conditions would become intolerable.

"The first condition of success is to recognize that to an always greater degree the modern industrial state depends for its happiness, its efficiency, its culture, and its civilization, upon the condition of the wage-earning population.

"There has never been a time in the history of the world when the means with which to attain the social objective I have stated were so richly available. What has been lacking has been understanding of

Curb Prices Dip In Heavy Trading

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—In another million share session the curb market today felt the force of active selling, although some specialties made wide gains. Most of the leaders lost ground with the big board. Aluminum Co. of America closed at 160, off 5; Newmont 129¾, off 3¼; Pan American Airways 70¼, off 2¾.

Utilities sagged fractionally. Oils were mixed, with creole up 2 at 36½. Gulf Oil lost ¾. Babcock & Wilcox 5, Commonwealth Edi- "A" 1⅛. Transactions were 1,054,000 shares against 979,000 Friday.

Retail Advertising Gains 8.5 Per Cent

Chicago, Jan. 18.—A 8.5 per cent increase in the volume of display advertising placed in newspapers by retailers durhg the week ended January 9, 1937, compared with the same week of 1936, is reported today by Advertising Age.

Basing its figures on reports covering all of the newspapers in 71 major cities, Advertising Age says that retail advertising in those cities totaled 16,210,708 lines for the week, a gain of 1,275,546 lines over 1936.

Rubber Consumption Increases in Year

New York, Jan. 18.—Consumption of crude rubber by manufacturers in the United States for 1936 is estimated at 573,522 long tons, according to statistics released by the Rubber Manufacturers' Association today. This compares with 491,544 longs tons consumed during 1935.

December consumption is estimated to be 49,626 long tons, which compares with 50,303 long tons for November, 1936, and 42,474 long tons for December, 1935.

Grains Are Firm With Coming Cold

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—Indications that sub-zero temperatures Northwest will move Southward into winter wheat territory and the corn belt led to later upturns of grain values today. Corn, in particular, scored price advances of more than a cent a bushel maximum in some cases.

At the close, corn was ¾@1¼ up compared with Saturday's finish; May new, 112@112⅛; July new, 107¼@107⅜; September, 103⅛@103¼; wheat unchanged to ⅜ higher; May, 132¾@132⅞; July, 115¾@115⅞; September, 112@112⅛; oats, unchanged to ¼ advance; May, 53⅞@54, and rye showing ½@1⅛ bulge, May 110¾. Provisions results were unchanged to 15 cents higher.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil declined 7 to 10 points early today under liquidation and selling in September by foreign interest but rallied later on covering and commission house buying. The late rally was influenced by the firmness of lard, hogs and crude oil and rumors of advances in tallow. Final prices were 6 lower to 1 net higher. Sales, 245 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; March closed 11.45, May 11.57, July 11.63, September 11.58.

Argentina Retires $39,600,000 Bonds

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—A $39,600,000 retirement of Argentine Republic bonds through sinking fund operations, was announced today by Dr. Roberto M. Ortiz, minister of finance. All the national external sinking fund 6 per cent bonds of 1927, due February 1, 1961, and the national external sunking funds 5½ per cent bonds of 1928, due Februaryl, 1962, now outstanding and not previously called will be redeemed.

This move was another step in the general program of reduction of the cost of service of the dollar debt, recently begun with the redemption on December 1, 1936, of about $60,000,000 of the outstanding bonds.

Lumber Shipments 52 Per Cent of 1929

The lumber industry during the week ended January 9 stood at 47 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 52 per cent of 1929 shipments.

Production and shipments are gradually resuming after the holiday declines, but are still restricted by the continued maritime strike. Reported new business dropped slightly from the high levels of December weeks, but bookings during the week ended January 9 were 24 per cent above output.

Gold Comes Back Into Circulation

Geneva, Jan. 18 (AP).—Wary holders of gold sent $676,000,000 back into circulation during the last three months of 1936, the League of Nations announced today.

The greatest increase in visible gold supplies between September 30 and December 31 was in Great Britain, the League said, where $314,000,000 was brought out of hiding places. The United States increase was estimated at $250,000,000.

Big Rubber Companies Increase Tire Prices

Akron, Ohio, Jan. 18 (AP).—Four major rubber companies announced increases of 6 per cent in the retail prices of tires today. The increases went into effect throughout the country today.

The four companies announcing the increase were the B. F. Goodrich Co., the General Tire & Rubber Co., the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., and Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. Goodyear officials said the increases applied to all types of tires except bicycle tires and pneumatic tires for toys. The increases, the Goodyear announcement said, were due to "a rapidly rising crude rubber market."

the opportunity which offers and the bitter need to grasp at it, and the social consent which can only come from understanding."

A. B. A. Conference.

Washington will be represented on the speakers' list at the regional conference of the American Bankers Association, by Comptroller Arthur J. Linn of Hamilton National Bank. His subject is "Income From Banking Services." The conference will be held at Pittsburgh, January 28-29. The meetings mark a continuance of those inaugurated last year by President Robert V. Fleming of Riggs National Bank, when he was chief executive of the bankers' association.

President Tom K. Smith, of the association, will preside and speak on "Why Banks Should Counsel Together," and "Association Activities."

"Dollars and Sense."

The latest issue of Dollars and Sense, publication of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, and edited by A. E. Henze of W. B. Hibbs & Co., reveals a long list of active members of the chapter and five sustaining members. The latter are: William H. Baden, Washington Loan & Trust Co., J. A. Broderick, member of the Federal Reserve Board; C. F. Burton, president of the City Bank; George M. Fisher, Washington Loan & Trust Co., and M. S. Szymczak, member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve Board.

The chapter's active membership list reveals a gain of 20 in comparison with personnel at the close of 1935. Norman E. Towson of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., has contributed a review of 1936 and a prospectus of 1937.

Fenner & Beane Survey.

Increasingly serious housing shortages, higher rentals, and recovery in purchasing power combine to make the 1937 outlook for residential building among the most favorable for any industry at the present time, in the opinion of the F. & B. Industries Service, a bimonthly survey of 28 industries prepared by Fenner & Beane, New York Stock Exchange firm, with local offices. Vacancies in many cities are less than 3 per cent, to compare with a normal 5 per cent even in years of large-scale building, the report indicates. Rents have already recovered half of the decline from the boom years of the late twenties.

A. I. B. Dinner.

Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, was well represented at the annual banquet of the Norfolk-Portsmouth Chapter at Norfolk, Va., last Saturday night. Those who attended were Paul J. Seitzer, president of Washington Chapter; William H. Laughlin, first vice president; Joseph R. Fitzpatrick, second vice president; J. Earle McGeary, past president; G. Elmer Flather, member of the board, and Robert G. Whitton.

Win Insurance Honors.

High year-end business honors for J. G. Hopkins and F. V. McNair, representatives in Washington for the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company, were announced yesterday. Hopkins ranked seventh among all agents of the company in personal paid production for 1936. McNair was named among the ten leading agents in the production of largest paid applications for December.

German Pacifist Gets Prize Money

Berlin, Jan. 18 (AP).—Karl von Ossietzky, German pacifist, has obtained the first part of his Nobel Peace Prize money by conferring a power of attorney upon Lawyer Kurt Wannow, it was learned today.

(Simultaneous reports from Oslo quoted the newspaper Aftenposten as saying Mrs. Alexandra Kreutzenberger, "mysterious woman" who appeared there to collect part of the $37,000 prize, was a bona fide emissary of Wannow.

(The newspaper said police suspicions of Mrs. Kreutzenberger, which resulted in the taking up of her passport, had been aroused because Von Ossietzky failed to inform German authorities in Oslo of his move.)

Official Notices

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, January 5, 1937. Public hearings having been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the matter of closing certain streets and public alley as hereinafter described, and the said Commissioners being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of said closing, and that the same are in the public interests and not detrimental to the interests of abutting property owners, notice is hereby given that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "Ordered: That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the street and alley area as shown in green on plats filed in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, and numbered as Maps 1782 and 1995, is hereby ordered closed, same to take effect on and after February 1, 1937, the title to the land comprised in said area so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said maps; the said streets and public alley hereby ordered closed being described as follows: L. Closing Stuart drive, Seventeenth st. and Naylor road southeast, and a public alley, all lying within Anacostia Park, known as U. S. Reservation No. 343, in the section lying northwesterly of Fairlawn avenue southeast, and Closing part of Chesapeake street between Linnean avenue and Thirtieth street northwest, involving also a dedication of land for highway purposes in lieu thereof." And all parties interested must file objections to said closing in writing before the effective date of above order; otherwise said order shall become effective on February 1, 1937, as aforesaid, and said street and alley area shall on and after said date become closed in accordance with the provisions of said act. MELVIN C. HAZEN, GEORGE E. ALLEN, DAN I. SULTAN, Commissioners, D. C.

A WALL OF PROTECTION
CERTAIN-TEED provides efficient insulation as well as great structural strength.
Applied to interior walls, CERTAIN-TEED offers these important advantages: Insulates as it beautifies . . . Provides permanent decoration . . . Corrects acoustics . . . Reduces the passage of sound through walls and ceilings . . . And it is easily cleaned. Ordinary insulating materials lose much of their efficiency through the absorption of moisture. This cannot happen with CERTAIN-TEED. Use it inside your house—for new construction and for remodeling.
No Down Payment, 3 Years to Pay on the F. H. A. Plan.
COSTS NOTHING TO FIND OUT
Don't delay. Get the facts. Inquire about our low prices—and save. Old roofs made new by applying CERTAIN-TEED Millerised shingles right over the old roof.

APPLE MARY

By Martha Orr

MARY CAN'T FOOL ME. I KNOW HER CONSCIENCE IS HURTIN' HER SUMPIN' FIERCE — EVEN THOUGH SHE DENIES IT.
SHE KNOWS THAT JUS' 'CAUSE SLIM DON'T REMEMBER WHO HE IS, OR WHERE HE COMES FROM, THAT'S NO SIGN HE AIN'T GOT A FAMILY LOOKIN' FER HIM.
AN' SHE'S SCARED STIFF THEY'LL COME AND TAKE HIM AWAY. CAN'T BLAME HER A LOT, BUT IT'S FUNNY WE HAVEN'T HEARD FROM THEM 'FORE THIS.

Mystery Bidder Gets Gelding, Paying $2,225

'Unwanted' Horse Is Sold for Eight Times His Feed Bill.

not worth $2,225 to me." McEvoy had bid to $2,000 and stopped.

Owner Still Unknown.

The original owner of Cypress still is unknown. The horse was shipped to Washington from Toronto last November addressed to Mrs. John Hay Whitney, who has an estate near Warrenton, Va., but Mrs. Whitney and the shipper, one L. L. Briden, have disclaimed ownership and refused to pay Cypress' railway fare and board bill, which now total about $300.

The third act of the great horse mystery no doubt will be a fight for the $1,925 balance left over now that the Express Company has its money. "Every one concerned has been so vociferous in disclaiming ownership," Attorney Drury said last night, "that I suppose the claimants will have to fight it out in court. I know I won't hand over the balance until a court is satisfied on the true ownership of the horse."

Pedigree Not Transferred.

Cypress Dan Beau was almost as excited as the horsey crowd which gathered under the barn rafters of Dr. C. Backwell Robinson, veterinarian at 222 C street northwest, where the mystery horse has been boarding since November 25. Cypress pawed the straw in his stall, swayed from side to side, and rolled his eyes as this dramatic moment in his life took place.

Cypress has quite a distinguished record in the equine Blue Book. He has won numerous prizes and taken part in many shows. He is a jumper by profession. His pedigree, however, was not transferred yesterday because the auctioneer, Adam Weschler, did not have it to transfer. "The horse is sold," he said, "as is' without any warranties."

Reynolds Funeral To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Albert George Reynolds, 52, survey engineer in the commercial department of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., who died Sunday in Emergency Hospital following an operation, will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Lee undertaking establishment. Burial will be private.

Reynolds, who lived at 4541 South Dakota avenue northeast, was a native of Brooklyn, N. Y. He had served with telephone companies for 30 years, having begun his professional career with the New York Telephone Co. in 1906.

He came to the Chesapeake & Potomac Co. in 1918.

Reynolds was a member of Reliance Lodge of Masons. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Marguerite K. Reynolds; two sisters, Mrs. Harry R. Townsend, of Brooklyn, and Mrs. W. W. Vanderbilt, of Birmingham, Ala., and two brothers, Clarence M. Reynolds, of Hackensack, N. J., and William A. Reynolds, of Brooklyn.

Cabinet Members See Striking Seamen

Harris & Ewing.

Roper, Miss Perkins Confer With Strikers

that the West Coast strike was practically settled but that "continuous discharge books" remained a principal thorn in the side of 40,000 sailors there.

Blacklists Possible.

"Continuous discharge books," the center of the seamen's protests, are provided for in the Copeland-Bland act. The act says every United States sailer must carry a record book showing voyages, ships and his behavior during each cruise. Sailors fear the "behavior" notations entered by ship captains will include mention of union activities, and thus will become blacklists which can be used to keep active union men on shore and out of work.

Later, the spokesmen advanced on Senator Copeland at the Capitol. He refused to concur in their request for support of the Sirovich bill, refused to address the seamen "because it would be undignified and lead to a lot of name-calling," and told them he was in favor of modifying his own law so that no blacklists could be compiled from the "continuous discharge books."

"I want to be certain the books will not be used as blacklists," Copeland said. "I want the duplicates which are sent here to Washington kept confidential. Exchange of information by operators of the lines should be prohibited by law.

"I agreed with the men that if a seaman's certificate is revoked there should be a door left open for appeal. I agreed that is the American way. A review board was my suggestion, to be made up of a representative of the Department of Commerce, a member of the union and a third man appointed by the district judge."

Miss Perkins called the attention of the men to the fact that many seamen approve of the "continuous discharge book" system as it now stands. She said Great Lakes sailors especially were in favor of it. "The books provide a record of good men which will help them gain advancement," she said.

"Yes, but don't you see how easy it would be for a mate who didn't happen to like you to mark down your behavior as bad," interjected curran. "Why, Miss Secretary, they could give you a black mark for life if you spit on deck or sassed the bosun. They'd call it misbehavior. But the big point is, they'd mark down a black mark against you if you were a union worker, and that's what we're afraid of—that they'll soon be discriminating against union men."

Not Aggrieved at Act.

Miss Perkins admitted that such might be the case, but added that the men were aggrieved not with the purpose of the act, but with the way they feared it might be administered. All nodded their heads at this, saying they were in favor of the safety at sea act, but wanted the act clarified as to what constitutes "misbehavior."

Other minor points they seek to have amended are these: 1. Stewards are not provided for in the act; 2. No provision is made as to overtime. Cash is demanded; 3. The act provides for three watches of 8 hours each, but does not specify how the watches shall be stood nor by whom.

Many of the marchers bore placards denouncing the Copeland act as a "fink law," called it "Copeland's Fink Book," announced "Dog Collars Are for Dogs, Not Sailors," and asked "Shall American Seamen Be Slaves?" Half of the men came on foot, others hitch-hiked, some rode in autos and open trucks, and a few came over in a rickety wagon pulled by a very tired horse. One woman was in the throng.

The sailors requested permission to hold a meeting in the Labor Department auditorium, but Miss Perkins refused them, explaining the hall was operated by the Parks Commission, not her. The sailors disbursed to go sightseeing and gather again at 2 in the afternoon when Curran told them what had been accomplished. By later afternoon the Baltimore delegation, numbering about 300, departed for home. The others left the city about 8 last night by bus and other transportation. Part of their finances was supplied by a tag-day staged in New York.

Vanderbilt Begins 14,000-Mile Flight

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 18 (AP).—Commodore William K. Vanderbilt and a party of friends took off today to cruise 14,000 miles around the South American continent in a private plane equipped with all the comforts of home.

Their route lies down the coast of South America to Buenos Aires, across the Andes to Santiago, Chile, and back up the west coast. It will be a leisurely flight of about a month.

The $150,000 ship includes a bar, kitchen, lounge, and sleeping accommodations for eight persons.

With Vanderbilt are his wife and two friends, Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Huntington of New York and Palm Beach. Capt. Earl P. White, former Pan-American Airways flyer and Army aviator, and Henry Gurston, a mechanic, compose the crew.

police and waiters. Unknown to most of those present, Cicero, who had slumped under his table, was carried out and down a fire escape to the theater lobby on the lower floor.

While this was happening, the toastmaster introduced Grover Whalen, president of New York's 1939 world's fair and one-time official of Greater New York City.

Whalen Cut Short.

Whalen, not knowing Cicero was breathing his last on the lobby floor below, remarked jokingly of the brawl as he began to discuss the proposed revival of the NRA. He never finished the speech.

Detectives arrived, ordered all doors locked and told the orchestra drummer to sound a call for attention. Then came the tedious questioning and re-enactment of the crime.

Inquiry disclosed that some of those at Cicero's table had been drinking heavily. There were three others with him and two men from an adjoining table had walked over when the fight started.

Then it was discovered that six persons, including these two men, had escaped the police blockade. Three were found later at their homes.

At 5:45 a. m., six hours after the melee, ten persons remaining in the ballroom were taken to a police station for further questioning. These included the three persons at Cicero's table.

Head Cut by Chair.

They were Thomas Crawford, 30, whose wife was Cicero's sister-in-law; Carmine Muccio and Joseph Bassaro, both of Stamford. Crawford's head was cut from a blow with a chair.

Tonight, Detective Louis Pagani, assisting Inspector Michael F. McDermott in directing the man-hunt, said "nobody is being detained."

As detectives sought the three men still missing, they expressed conviction that liquor had caused the fatal argument. They discounted the theory that labor trouble was involved, which was inspired by the fact that Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey has been engaged in investigating the garment trucking business with which Cicero was connected.

The Manhattan Opera House is the scene of Max Reinhardt's huge religious production, "The Eternal Road," but there was no performance there last night.

Rains Increase Flood Damage Over 7 States

Disaster Fears Heightened Along Raging Ohio River; Pittsburgh Warned.

Fifteen families evacuated their houses at Manchester.

Meteorologists warned riverside householders at Pittsburgh that streams probably would go beyond flood levels today. A crest of 28 or 29 feet was predicted at the confluence of the Allegheny, Monongahela and Ohio there. Flood stage is 25.

At Henderson, Ky., a crest of 47.5 feet—9½ over flood stage—was expected Friday. Virtually all of Union Township, Ind., was under water. Boats provided the only transportation for hundreds of bottomland folk.

PALL MALL
THE MODERN BLEND

You have never smoked a cigarette like this

Pall Mall, The Modern Blend, is unique. It derives its flavour solely from fine tobaccos. It is made in the same, simple English manner as the Turkish Pall Mall, long famous as "A Shilling in London, A Quarter Here."

The Modern Blend of Pall Mall, at 15¢ for 20, is made from selected domestic tobaccos, enriched by Oriental types. It is the only cigarette of its type that contains no artificial flavouring, sweetening or medication. You get none of the after-taste caused by artificial flavouring.

On the back of the special English wrapping is a tab, which enables you to open one corner easily and leave the rest of the cellulose for continued protection.
